BOY BITTEN; DOG FACES EXECUTION

Aide Feared 'Blackmail' By Hoover

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A high FBI official handed an assistant attorney general secret wiretap records in July, 1971, for fear J. Edgar Hoover might use them to blackmail President Nixon as he had "used wiretap information to blackmail other Presidents."

The story came to light today in five volumes of evidence published by the House Judiciary Committee before it begins debate next week on whether Nixon's conduct in office warrants impeachment.

The new evidence traces how political spying developed in the White House —using the same personnel and techniques —from elaborate machinery set up to combat news leaks of sensitive national security matters.

So deep was Nixon's concern with the leaks, a newly published tape transcript shows, that at one time he considered ordering lie detector tests for 400,000 government workers who had "top secret" clearance.

But the big surprise in the 2,314 pages of evidence came in a sworn statement given FBI agents on May 10, 1973, by Robert Mardian, the former assistant attorney general and once a high official in the Nixon re-election campaign. Mardian has been indicted in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy.

Mardian told how William Sullivan, Hoover's deputy at the FBI, came to him in July, 1971, and said he feared he was going to be fired because of policy differences with Hoover.

Sullivan said he wanted to give Mardian wiretaps ordered by Henry A. Kissinger after news had leaked out about the U.S. fallback position in the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT).

"He said this was wiretap information and that, in his opinion, Mr. Hoover could not be entrusted with this information," the FBI report said. Mardian first expressed reluctance to talk about the incident, it noted.

"Mr. Sullivan continued the conversation, saying that Mr. Hoover had used wiretap information to blackmail other presidents of the United States and was afraid that he could blackmail Mr. Nixon with this information.

"Mr. Sullivan reiterated his request of Mr. Mardian to personally contact the President of the United States and to pass along Mr. Sullivan's information and request."

There was no elaboration from Mardian in the statement about Sullivan's view that Hoover had blackmailed presidents. But Hoover, who had held the FBI directorship since the 1920s, had long been regarded before his death as potentially one of the most powerful men in Washington because of his access to all the FBI secrets.

Mardian was asked if he gave the bag containing the wiretap data to Nixon. "He sat back in his chair, shrugged his shoulders, hesitated and said, "I cannot answer that question,"' the report said.

The SALT taps were only one

Court Orders Country Club Annex Effort

Property Value Statute Ruled Unconstitutional

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The California State Court of Appeal yesterday ordered the City of San Rafael to resume annexation proceedings of the unincorporated Country Club tract.

The action came as the court's first appellate district panel unanimously declared unconstitutional state law linking merger with property values.

The ruling in effect will allow Country Club residents to vote on the annexation issue.

The city council dropped annexation of the area last January after owners of 57 per cent of the assessed valuation of the land involved opposed consolidation with San Rafael. The council cited a state law which said owners of more than half the value of the land proposed for annexation could block merger by protesting.

That law was struck down yesterday as "constitutionally infirm" by Presiding Justice John B. Molinari, who ruled that all residents, regardless of the size or value of their property, have an equal interest in

Board Gives Nod To Fire District

The Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission last night approved formation of a county service area to finance improved fire protection to neighbors outside San Rafael.

Approval came on a 3-to-1 vote with commissioner Roy Farrington Jones dissenting and Gary T. Giacomini absent.

Jones sided with several residents of Country Club who said the special taxing area would work against eventual annexation of the unincorporated neighborhoods to San Rafael.

Other commissioners agreed with the recommendations from representatives of California Park, Bret Harte, Santa Venetia, Rafael Meadows, Bayside Acres and Knockaboul.

It calls for a single taxing area covering unincorporated areas north and south of Puerto Suello Hill. Other proposals called for two taxing areas divided at the hill.

The single taxing area would finance a new county fire station at the top of the hill and staff it with three men and two trucks at all times.

The matter now goes before county supervisors, who have indicated they will approve placing it before voters in November.

The ballot measure will ask voters if they are willing to tax themselves 71 cents per $100 assessed valuation for improved fire protection.

The proposed tax rate is 24 cents higher than residents are currently paying in the form of Economy Slump; Mild Recession?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Battered by continued heavy inflation, the output of the nation's economy slumped for the second straight quarter from April through June, the Commerce Department reported today.

It was the first six-month decline in economic production in nearly five years and lent weight to arguments that the United States has undergone at least a mild recession in the first half of 1974.

Economic output fell at a 1.2 per cent seasonally adjusted annual rate in the second quarter, the department said. This was an improvement over the January-March drop of 7 per cent but was not strong enough to sustain predictions from the administration that the economy had registered a positive growth in the second quarter.

Pices, meanwhile, rose at an 8.8 per cent annual clip, less than the 12.3 per cent first quarter explosion but still strong enough to wipe out any gain in national economic growth.

The new statistics reflect an economy that is shaking off the debilitating effects of the energy crisis, but not quite as fast

Situation Grows Tense Over Cyprus

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit said today after talks with U.S. and British leaders in London that the situation in the eastern Mediterranean is "very grave" and that Greece is sending military forces into Cyprus by land and by sea.

The threat of a Turkish invasion of Cyprus apparently was pushed back until at least Saturday when the Turkish parliament recessed an emergency joint session in Ankara until then. Turkey has massed up to 90,000 troops on its southern coast 50 miles from Cyprus and landing craft and warships were standing offshore.

President Nixon's envoy Joseph Sisco joined British leaders in a formal and concerted effort to dissuade Turkey from invading the island, a move that could plunge NATO allies Greece and Turkey into war. Both nations have alerted their troops and Turkey has sent reinforcements to its border with Greece.

Ecevit said after his two-and-a-half hour conference with Sisco, "The situation is very grave." He told newsmen, "The time element is very important because hour by hour the Greek military presence in Cyprus is increasing and consolidating the illegal regime there."

He said he has received reports that Greek military forces

Narcotics Squad Silence Ordered

By ERIK M. INGRAM

Four Marin County Mental Health officials were ordered today to make no further comment on a controversial narcotics squad proposed by the City of San Rafael.

In a memorandum from Donald Sanford, acting director of the health and human services department, the four officials were told any comment "would be inappropriate."

Sanford's gag order was issued to Dr. Robert L. Taylor, mental health program chief; J. Jay Shinohara, Taylor's assistant; Dr. Dwight Murray, substance abuse chief; and Lloyd Churgin, drug abuse coordinator.

Churgin confirmed receipt of the memo today and said he will not be able to address the North Bay Criminal Justice Planning Council tonight as a result.

Churgin, who serves as staff to the Marin County Drug Abuse Technical Advisory Committee, had been asked by the committee to appear at the meeting in Napa and outline the committee's concerns with San Rafael's proposal.

Sanford said today he issued

Phoners Reject Pact, Call A Strike Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The executive board of the Communications Workers of America early today rejected a contract offer from American Telephone & Telegraph and authorized a strike vote among the union's 500,000 members employed by the Bell system.

(In Marin, some 550 Pacific Telephone Co. employees are represented by Communications Workers of America Local 9404 and are affected by the strike vote.)

CWA President Glenn E. Watts, chairman of the union's national bargaining committee, announced the decision 90 minutes after most of the more than 100 contracts in the Bell system expired at midnight.

Just before expiration, the contracts were extended on a two-day at a time basis, the company announced.

Talks have been going on for several months here in the first nationwide bargaining between AT&T and two major international unions and several independents covering all of Bell's 750,000 workers.

Before the CWA announcement, pickets went up around phone company installations in the Charleston, W.Va., area. Local 2001, representing about 1,300 workers, walked out although no prestrike procedures had been completed, said CWA spokesman Dave Kent.

Kent, in Washington, said, "They probably are trying to show us (the negotiators) how much they support us." He added, however, that "no strike has been authorized in the Bell system."

He said he expected the walkout would last only a few days, in the absence of a nationwide settlement, and that the Charleston strike would not affect the negotiations.

Watts told the Bell System Bargaining Committee (BCBS) that contracts would be extended on a day-to-day basis until "such time as the parties enter into new contracts" or until either party gives the other 48 hours written notice of termination "of the contracts."

Nine Grass Fires Keep Machinery On The Road

Nine grass fires were reported in Marin County yesterday, two of which burned three acres in the 200 block of Biscayne Drive in San Rafael and five acres near Gnoss Field in Novato.

Twenty firemen and seven trucks from the San Rafael and Marin County fire departments responded at 10:20 a.m. to the blaze on Biscayne Drive.

It took the firemen 20 minutes to contain the fire and an hour for mop up operations.

Although cause of the blaze is undetermined, Capt. Kenneth Mazza of the San Rafael Fire Department believes the blaze was intentionally set.

At 3:15 p.m. yesterday, six trucks and 35 men from the Novato Fire Department responded to a grass and brush fire one mile north of Bahia Drive and south of Gnoss Field.

Lawyer Says Transcript Refutes Dean Testimony

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential lawyer James D. St. Clair, summing up President Nixon's impeachment defense, gave the House Judiciary Committee a new transcript today which he said disproved Watergate testimony by John W. Dean, Nixon's former counsel.

St. Clair told reporters at the conclusion of his 90-minute summation for a closed committee session that the transcript proved Nixon was not aware of and did not approve payment of hush money to E. Howard Hunt.

Although the committee had subpoenaed the tape of the conversation on which the transcript was based, Nixon withheld it on the ground it was not relevant.

However, St. Clair said, it became relevant because Dean "changed his testimony" about events of March 21, 1973, when he discussed Hunt's demands with Nixon. That night, Hunt was paid $75,000.

The new 2-½ page transcript was of a conversation with Nixon and H.R. Haldeman on the following morning in which, St. Clair said, Nixon made clear his disapproval of paying blackmail.

St. Clair said Dean had previously testified "nothing was resolved at the end of March 21 meeting." But when called before the Judiciary Committee to testify, Dean said "something was decided," St. Clair said.

To refute Dean's testimony,

Resolution Passes To Telecast Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Rules Committee took the first step today toward opening up the judiciary committee's final debate on impeachment for television and radio coverage.

The rules committee approved, 10-to-3, a resolution which would allow the judiciary committee to vote to allow electronic coverage.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Franco's Condition Improves

MADRID (UPI) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco has made further progress toward recover from a circulatory ailment and will be released from the hospital in a few days, his doctors said today.

Franco

Franco, 81, was hospitalized nine days ago for treatment of phlebitis, a potentially dangerous inflammation of the veins in his right thigh.

"The venous process . . . continues to recede", a bulletin signed by six doctors said. "It has been agreed to maintain for a few days hospitalization before his release so the customary general examination can be completed."

The doctors said Franco has withstood yesterday's increased physical activity — in which he posed for photographers and walked around his hospital suite — without any ill effects.

Checks Crisis

LISBON (UPI) — President Antonio de Spinola ended a week of political crisis in Portugal today, swearing in a military-dominated cabinet to combat economic problems at home and wind down three colonial wars in Africa.

Spinola was scheduled to swear in the new, 17-member "government of discipline" after selecting military men for seven key cabinet posts.

Newspapers in Lisbon predicted Spinola would use the swearing-in ceremony to make a major statement about the future of Portuguese Guinea, one of the country's three African territories.

Egypt Next Stop

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon wound up a two-day trip to Israel today, warning of possible new restrictions on U.S. foreign aid because of America's own economic troubles.

Simon took time out from his economic discussions to tour northern Israel before a final round of talks with Defense Minister Shimon Peres.

The treasury secretary was scheduled to fly to Saudi Arabia late in the day on the third leg of his four-nation Middle East tour. The trip, which began in Egypt, is to end in Kuwait.

Simon said last night his talks with Israeli leaders were "very far reaching" and "very frank." He warned, however, of possible restrictions on American aid.

Shoot-Out Victim

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — A kidnaped Argentine newspaper publisher died in a shoot-out at a rural farmhouse southeast of Buenos Aires late yesterday, 22 days after he was abducted during a morning stroll.

Police said the publisher, David Kraiselburd, 61, was found dead with two bullet wounds after a prolonged gunbattle between police and the kidnapers two and a half miles north of La Plata, 35 miles southeast of Buenos Aires.

Kraiselburd was kidnaped June 25 as he walked the three blocks from his home in La Plata to his office in the morning newspaper El Dia.

London Stopover

LONDON (UPI) — Frank Sinatra arrived at Heathrow Airport today fresh from his battles with the Australian press and en route to Biarritz, France.

Sinatra, who created a storm in Australia by calling the country's newsmen "parasites" and newswomen "hookers," stepped off a Qantas Australian airlines jet and was whisked away to the executive jet terminal to await a private flight.

Anthrax Isolated

MARLIN, Tex. (UPI) — Animal health officials in Texas and Oklahoma say they have isolated and controlled an outbreak of anthrax. But the disease, which is contageous and can infect humans, has already killed at least 200 cattle in Texas.

A special agent for Gov. Dolph Briscoe toured farmlands strewn with the burned carcasses of diseased cattle yesterday and said everything appears under control.

Report Of Unrest

HONG KONG (UPI) — Gangsters and other "bad elements" have "seriously sabotaged social order" in Kiangsu, China's most densely populated province, according to a provincial radio report monitored here.

The report was broadcast from Nanking, the provincial capital and last seat of the Nationalist government of Chiank Kai-shek.

It also said some "class enemies" were taking advantage of the current mass political campaign to disrupt production and create problems in transport and communications.

Tower Bomb Spurs Death Penalty Cry

LONDON (UPI)-Several members of parliament called today for the reintroduction of the death penalty in response to a suspected Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb that mangled children and their parents in the historic Tower of London.

A police spokesman said one woman was killed and 39 persons, including seven children in their sub-teens, were injured in the blast yesterday at London's most popular tourist sight. Four of the wounded were American girls. A child's foot was blown off. A youngster was blinded.

Scotland Yard warned of more blasts against tourist attractions following yesterday's bombing at the historic Tower of London, which contains the crown jewels and a world-famous collection of armor and weapons.

Detectives tentatively blaming the IRA said an American girl filming the tower might provide a key clue to the identity of the terrorists.

The London Daily Mirror said it received a telephoned warning from a man with an Irish accent two minutes before the explosion.

"This is the Provo IRA," the Mirror quoted him as saying. "The codeword is 'bastards.' We are planting bombs."

Edward Gardner, a prominent Conservative party member of parliament, said he and several other members would seek a bill reimposing the death penalty for such attacks.

"The temper of the people of this country will not tolerate for much longer the absence of adequate punishment for criminals who are responsible for such outrages," he said.

Students' Rights Measure Passed

BOSTON (UPI) — Public school students in Massachusetts cannot be suspended or expelled for "marriage, pregnancy" or "parenthood" under a bill passed by the Massachusetts legislature.

The bill specifically prohibits school officials from abridging the rights of students to dress as they wish so long as dress or "appearance" does not "violate reasonable standards of health, safety and cleanliness."

Mayor's Child Gives Self Up

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mayor Tom Bradley's 29-year-old daughter Phyllis, who has a police record going back seven years, surrendered yesterday on charges she was a supplier for a Hollywood narcotics ring.

Wearing a rhinestone-studded jeans suit, big floppy hat and dark glasses, Miss Bradley stalked without a word through a crowd of waiting newsmen after being released on $1,000 bail, and disappeared in a waiting car.

Although her attorney objected that she should be released on her own recognizance, Municipal Judge Sheldon Sloan insisted on bail, citing her past record. He scheduled a hearing for July 31 for Miss Bradley and three other defendants.

Undercover sheriff's narcotics officers said that after making a large buy of cocaine in west Hollywood, the arrested suspects identified Phyllis Bradley as their supplier. Deputies with a search warrant said they found enough marijuana to make 250 cigarettes and amphetamines in her apartment and also charged her with "conspiracy to furnish cocaine."

Miss Bradley is still awaiting trial on charges of assaulting a police officer, filed after she was taken to police headquarters June 27, manacled hand and foot, after allegedly kicking and clawing officers who chased her auto when she sped away from a motorcycle patrolman who tried to stop her for a traffic violation.

PHYLLIS BRADLEY
Mayor's daughter

She was convicted in 1967 of stealing clothes from a car and in 1972 of possessing marijuana. A shoplifting charge was dismissed.

The mayor, a former high ranking police official, has said only, following the assault arrest, that he had no reason to think the arresting officers acted improperly.

Iran Buying Big Slice Of Krupp Steel

ESSEN, West Germany (UPI) — Iran is buying a quarter of the giant Krupp steelworks in the biggest move by an oil-producing nation into Western industry, it was announced today.

Krupp, a munitions maker for Nazi Germany and one of the world's major industrial empires, announced approval of Iran's purchase of 25.4 per cent of the firm's steel division.

The announcement gave no details, but said the pact was linked with Iranian oil deliveries and the Tehran government's participation in West Germany's gasoline service station network.

The accord marked a major change for Krupp, a big arms maker for Germany's military machine during the two world wars, and reflected the increasing financial power of the world's oil-producing nations.

The 163-year-old firm, which was entirely owned by the Krupp family until recently, will have a non-German sitting on its 18-man supervisory board for the first time.

The pact gave Iran one-quarter of Krupp Huettenwerke, the empire's steel and engineering division.

Phouma Physicians

VIENTIANE (UPI) — A team of three Chinese doctors arrived today to assist in the care of Laotian Premier Souvanna Phouma during his recovery from a severe heart attack.

Child Care Funds Not All Spent

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Legislative analyst A. Alan Post disclosed yesterday that $4.97 million less than what was budgeted was spent last year on California's child care centers.

In a letter to state Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco, the analyst said the underspending resulted from state rationing of funds in an effort to prevent spending more than a fixed ceiling.

"If we were aware of underspending in advance, then funds might be reallocated," he noted.

Post urged that the state Department of Education issue a report each Jan. 1 on what had been spent in the first six months and then project spending for the next half year.

Marks said he would seek legislative reforms to see that all the allocated money is spent.

Marks' interest in the centers stems from a suit in which San Francisco centers are protesting new state regulations prohibiting children from two-parent families from using the facilities.

St. Martin Parish, founded in 1811, is the center of Louisiana's Teche country, home of the Acadians and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's "Evangeline."

Pair Seeking Ballot Spot For Gambling

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Two San Francisco residents have launched a drive to place 15 initiatives before state voters including measures to abolish the death penalty and legalize casino gambling in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The proposed initiatives also would freeze certain prices at 1974 levels, establish a state lottery, impose a 5 per cent tax on retail purchases made on credit, permit only the state to sell liquor and repeal the 10-cent per pack excise tax on cigarettes.

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. yesterday said the initiative sponsores, Patrick H. O'Shaughnessy and Ms. Bunny Roth, have until Dec. 6 to collect sufficient voter signatures to place the measures on the next statewide ballot after the November general election. The deadline for qualifying measures for the November ballot has passed.

Brown said the sponsors received the official titles and summaries of their proposals.

Man Killed, Wife Hurt In Crash

A young San Francisco man was killed yesterday when the car in which he was riding went over an embankment on the Bolinas-Fairfax Road.

The Highway Patrol said Eugene David Larson, 24, was fatally injured when thrown from the auto and pinned beneath the wreckage.

The vehicle, which careened down a 70-foot embankment and flipped over, was driven by his wife, Linda Susan, 21. She was treated at Marin General for bruises.

Officers said two hikers in the area spotted the overturned car and heard Mrs. Larson screaming about 5:45 p.m. The accident apparently occurred about 45 minutes earlier. "If those pedestrians hadn't seen the car it might have been there for several days without being discovered," an officer said.

The crash happened about three miles south of the Meadow Club.

Larson was an employee of the San Francisco Municipal Railway.

He was the eighth traffic fatality in Marin this year, as compared to 19 highway deaths during the same period last year.

Jury Hands Down First Indictments

Marin's new grand jury handed down its first indictments yesterday, charging two San Francisco men in connection with the stabbing death of a Forest Knolls man.

Also indicted were two San Quentin convicts, Stanley Rush and Stanley T. Baliel, on charges they possessed prison-made knives on March 28.

Indicted in the murder of James Michael Torrey, 27, was Richard Vernon Stewart, 30, while Angelo Joseph Napoli, 33, was charged with being an accessory to the crime.

Marin sheriff's investigators said the men fought with Torrey beside the pool at his house July 5, then hopped into a getaway car and sped away, leaving Torrey fatally wounded.

Inmates Rush and Baliel had just been transferred to San Quentin from Deuel Vocational Institute in Tracy and were being processed when the weapons were found, said prison information officer William D. Nyberg.

Rush, 30, is serving a life term for murder and receiving stolen property in Santa Clara County, while Baliel, 25, faces six months to life for burglary and marijuana sales convictions in San Bernardino County.

Car Pools

DEKALB, Ill. (UPI) — More than 800 of Northern Illinois University's 4,000 commuter students have signed up for Compool, a computerized system designed to help students and staff members form car pools.

Girl Survives 160-Foot Fall

CARACAS (UPI) — A two-year-old baby girl survived a 14-story plunge and a crash through the tin roof of a parking lot with no more than a ruptured blood vessel and shock.

Venezuelan doctors at Caracas' Coche emergency clinic said yesterday Ingrid Checha is out of danger and suffered no internal injuries in the 160-foot fall.

A parking lot attendant found the girl on top of a car in his lot after he heard something crashing through the roof.

Plan To Purchase Home For Fire Chief Rapped

Some Tamalpais Valley residents yesterday protested plans by the Tamalpais Fire Protection District to buy a house for the district's fire chief.

About six persons appeared at a meeting of district directors to object to the planned purchase and to the manner in which it was decided to negotiate for the home at 898 Chamberlain Court, according to a spokesman for the protesters.

The decision was reached last week after directors emerged near midnight from a closed session on salary negotiations and after all the audience members had gone home, the spokesman said.

Residents said yesterday that buying the house, priced at about $58,480, would result in a housing allowance higher than they are willing to pay, even if the chief's salary was reduced.

Chief Dale N. Bennett said a public hearing on the matter will be scheduled for next week.

In other business, directors approved a 1974-75 budget of $387,324, up from the current spending program of $380,000.

The budget includes $262,740 for salaries, $57,238 for maintenance, $49,602 for capital assets and an $8,744 contingency reserve.

The fiscal plan is expected to raise the district tax rate two or three cents from its current level of 96.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, Bennett said.

Oceanside Service For Show Hostess

SIESTA KEY, Fla. (AP) — The family of television personality Chris Chubbuck conducted an oceanside memorial service today the way they thought she wanted it — with pop songs for the 120 mourners.

Transcript Read At Reinecke Trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — California Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke's testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee in 1972 was read today to a jury hearing charges that Reinecke lied to the Senate panel.

The jurors listened patiently for more than two hours as special Watergate prosecutors waded through a transcript from which matter deemed prejudicial to Reinecke had been deleted by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker.

The government prosecutors hope Reinecke's own testimony will help prove he lied when he told the committee he had not informed former Attorney General John N. Mitchell of an offer by ITT to help finance the 1972 Republican National Convention prior to a Justice Department settlement of an anti-trust suit against ITT.

Reinecke, who earlier had said he had met with Mitchell in May, 1971, said in his Senate testimony that he had not told Mitchell of the ITT offer until September 1971 —two months after settlement of the ITT case.

Reinecke's attorney, James E. Cox, was expected to renew his request to dismiss the case after the jury hears the government's final two witnesses later in the day.

Parker yesterday turned down a request by Cox to dismiss the case because a government witness testified the Senate record on which the charges were based contained some errors, but the judge said the matter could be raised again later.

Benjamin Firshein, a stenographer who recorded Reinecke's testimony before the Senate committee, caught government lawyers by surprise when he testified yesterday that corrections had been made in the transcript after it was submitted to the court.

Parker, after comparing the changes with the transcript as submitted in evidence, said they did not affect Reinecke's responses to senators' questions and permitted the trial to continue. However, the judge sharply criticized government lawyers for not having told the court about the changes.

Carpenters Pact Could Come Soon

OAKLAND (UPI) — A settlement of the month-old carpenters strike in Northern California was reported near today after all-night negotiations between the union and the Associated General Contractors.

Representatives for the Carpenters Union and the contractors met here throughout the night and were reportedly close to announcement of a settlement.

The walkout has tied up most major construction projects since mid-June when talks broke off in a dispute over a new contract for the carpenters.

Several major projects in Marin have been halted by the strike, including the Courthouse Square development in San Rafael, Novato Highway 101 bypass, a medical building in Greenbrae, a telephone building in Ignacio, Fireman's Fund computer center near Lucas Valley, Canon Village in Fairfax and the Greenwood Bay condominiums near Tiburon.

The union earlier reached agreement with home construction firms and most other construction trade unions have signed new pacts with the industry.

ANNEX

the annexation of the area in which they reside. Associate justices Richard M. Sims and Norman Elkington concurred.

The court cited a Supreme Court ruling in Los Angeles that held unconstitutional a portion of the state code permitting some landowners to deprive the rest of the electorate of a voice in incorporation proceedings. The court held that incorporation and annexation are merely different procedures to obtain the same goal.

According to yesterday's ruling, "Neither the benefits of city government nor its burdens can fairly be said to be directly proportional to the assessed value of land or to the special interests of landowners."

Court Clerk Clifford C. Porter said the city has 15 days in which to petition for a rehearing of the case. City Mgr. William J. Bielser, however, said he does not expect the city council to contest the ruling.

Bielser said he expects annexation of the area will be placed on the November ballot, and added he will seek guidance on a course of action by polling councilmen in light of deadlines for petitioning for a rehearing and for placing a measure on the ballot.

Yesterday's decision was prompted by Country Club residents John L. and Jane G. Levinsohn and Reatha T. Godwin, who sued the city when it dropped the merger attempt.

The Levinsohn suit said state law unjustly allowed a minority of voters of an area to deny local self government by a majority of voters.

Mrs. Levinsohn, a longtime booster of merger with the city, said today she was thrilled by the court decision.

"I think we did a good thing for a lot of people," she said. "I don't know if we'll win in November. But at least we'll get the chance to vote. That's democracy. That's what it's all about."

Joseph Kohlenstein, a member of Homeowners Opposed to Political Expansion, a group opposing annexation, said today he had not seen the court ruling and had "no opinion one way or the other" on it.

Dog Owner Takes Case To Court

Olex and Rufus fought it out in the lobby of Homestead Savings and Loan Association in San Rafael last November.

Now it appears round two will be fought in Marin Superior Court.

Olex, a German Shepherd guard dog, and Rufus, a three-year-old Irish setter, mixed it up while Rufus's owner, 27-year-old Graham Strathdee of Mill Valley, was on his way to his safe deposit box.

In a $1.25 million suit, Strathdee claims Olex and two guards for the Loomis Armored Car Service set on his dog, then maced when he tried to rescue Rufus.

But an attorney for Loomis and guards C. D. Camacho and Willi Cunningham said Rufus started the fight by attacking Olex.

No hearing date has been set on the suit, which also names Homestead as a defendant. Strathdee is a carpenter.

WIRETAPS

group of five separate wiretap incidents detailed in the Judiciary Committee evidence. One of them was the wiretap planted Memorial Day weekend, 1972, at Democratic headquarters at the Watergate office building and another, lasting from May, 1969 to Feb. 10, 1971, involved 17 government officials and reporters— and led to allegations that Kissinger had lied during his confirmation hearings.

Presidential attorney James D. St. Clair justified the decision to wiretap without obtaining warrants on the grounds the Supreme Court had "stated that the legality of foreign policy warrantless wiretaps was an open question," allowing the government to rely on lower court decisions upholding such wiretaps as legal.

The Judiciary report on evidence brought to 14 the number of volumes published by the panel, with more to come later this week.

High points in the new release:

Nixon frequently played a central role in White House efforts to halt news leaks, which reached what the President felt were alarming proportions in mid-1971 when Daniel Ellsberg gave the Pentagon Papers to several newspapers.

Presidential chief of staff H.R. Haldeman ordered all day surveillance of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., in 1971; and domestic adviser John D. Ehrlichman ordered a rapid investigation of Kennedy's involvement in the Chappaquiddick incident immediately following the accident.

CYPRUS

Sisco, the undersecretary of state for Middle Eastern Affairs, arrived earlier today with instructions from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to help cool the increasingly dangerous situation over Cyprus where the Greek-Cypriot National Guard overthrew President Archbishop Makarios Monday in a military coup.

Sisco scheduled another meeting with Ecevit and Deputy Foreign Minister Hasan later today after conferring with Foreign Secretary James Callaghan at the Foreign Office. Callaghan had met late into the night with the Turkish leaders and British diplomatic sources said they were unable to come to any agreement in the heated arguments.

The Greek government, despite repeated and intensifying pressure has so far not responded at all to allied or Soviet demands that it pull out its 650 officers commanding the Cypriot National Guard and who were said to have staged the coup.

The Foreign Office said Callaghan was in repeated consultation yesterday over the transatlantic telephone with Kissinger as the Cyprus situation became increasingly explosive. They agreed on the need for concerted diplomatic intervention.

UPI diplomatic correspondent K. C. Thaler said Britain was anxious to limit any action to diplomatic intervention and Turkey was poised for military invasion of the island whose independence it considers seriously endangered.

Hub City Council Adds To Budget

The San Anselmo City Council, continuing its review of a $2.1 million budget proposed for 1974-75, last night added $1,700 to the program.

The council allocated $1,300 to remodel a firehouse door and another $1,000 for microfilming work. The council cut $200 from its own account and $400 for engineering office supplies.

The council in a series of budget sessions has cut about $25,000 from the spending program as originally proposed by City Administrator-Controller Alfred C. Kaeppel.

The council set 8 p.m. Tuesday in city hall to review pay increases for city employees. The budget does not now include funds for salary hikes.

the order "because the matter is now in the hands of county supervisors. They are the ones who will make the decision.

"I don't want my staff stirring up the public," he said, adding he felt mental health staffers were attempting to kill the proposal.

"Law enforcement is a separate area . . . and what to do to enforce the law is its business," Sanford said.

The director added that his mental health staff should concern itself with the treatment of drug addicts.

The order was initiated, he continued, because Churgin planned to "create a disturbance" at the criminal justice council meeting tonight.

Churgin told the IndependentJournal he felt Sanford's order violated his rights and was an attempt to muzzle the advisory committee, appointed by county supervisors to review drug abuse matters.

Sanford later said no attempt was being made to gag the committee, adding the order applies only to the four members of his staff.

A committee of the Marin County Comprehensive Health Council, meanwhile, indicated last night that it would recommend council support of the special narcotics squad if the council received written assurance that the squad would concentrate on catching drug dealers rather than drug users.

The man who will head the squad, San Rafael's deputy police chief, Lawrence R. Kelly, said he would furnish such promises in writing in time for the council's executive committee meeting Monday at 5:30 p.m. at Marin General Hospital.

The San Rafael squad, to be funded primarily with federal law-and-order dollars, calls for five narcotics agents to operate throughout the county under agreements with various police departments and the county sheriff.

A former drug abuse bureau in Marin was criticized for putting too much emphasis on users and not enough on dealers.

a "structural fire tax," which would be dropped if the taxing area is approved.

About 6 cents of the total would be used for the fire station and equipment and 65 cents for operations.

Lari I. Sheehan, the commission's executive officer, said last night's approval was conditioned on a written "mutual aid agreement" being entered into between San Rafael and the county.

The commission also directed that detailed information about the proposed county service area be supplied voters prior to the November election.

Session Delayed

The regular meeting of the Marin City Community Services District board, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed to 8 p.m. next Thursday in Manzanita Center, according to General Mgr. Jack C. Williams.

OBITUARIES

Jack Otto Burgi, Nurseryman, Dead

Jack Otto Burgi, owner of Indian Valley Nursery and Novato civic leader, died Monday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 69.

Burgi was born in Switzerland and moved to New Zealand as a youth. He came to this country when he was 18. He worked as a tree surgeon and landscaper in various parts of the country, then he moved to Ross in 1933 and to Novato in 1940.

In 1947 he started the Indian Valley Nursery at 575 McClay Road. He was a pioneer in the art of moving large trees. He moved trees onto Treasure Island for the 1939 World's Fair, and did similar work for the Hearst Castle at San Simeon and the Louise Boyd Estate in San Rafael.

Burgi was active in civic affairs, particularly those which affected West Novato. For many years he was president of the West Novato Associates, a homeowners' group. As a spokesman for the area's homeowners, he was a familiar sight at city council and planning commission meetings.

Burgi is survived by his wife, Mabel; two sons, Richard A. Burgi of Petaluma and Jack J. Burgi of Glen Ellen who are continuing the nursery business; a sister, Berta Odermatt of Switzerland and eight grandchildren.

His body will be cremated and his ashes scattered among bristlecone pines, the world's oldest living trees, in the White Mountains near Bishop, Inyo County.

ELEANOR ZANDER

Eleanor G. Zander of Novato died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. She was 78.

She was born and lived most of her life in San Francisco and moved to Novato 13 years ago, residing at 1213 Leafwood Drive. Her husband, the late Edmund Zander, was a retired gardener and Spanish-American War veteran.

Mrs. Zander was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary of San Francisco, the Novato Senior Citizens and Our Lady of Loretto Church.

She is survived by a son, Walter Zander, with whom she made her home; two sisters, Dorothy Slater of San Francisco and Susan Novello of San Mateo and two grandchildren.

Private Mass of Christian Burial will be tomorrow. The Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. today at the Redwood Chapel Funeral Home in Novato. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael.

JOHN C. TENBROOK

Funeral for John C. Tenbrook, a longtime Petaluma resident, will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the Parent Funeral Chapel.

Tenbrook died Tuesday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 70.

He was born in Illinois and later lived in Missouri and Kansas. He and his family came to Petaluma in 1937.

For many years he was a rancher and carpenter, retiring 12 years ago. His home was at 333 Kentucky Street.

Tenbrook is survived by his wife, Irene Tenbrook; a daughter, Mary Duckett of Los Angeles; four sisters, Fern Gray of Sutherlin, Ore., Georgie Gerrits of Petaluma, Myrtle Hollis of Washington and Erline Hollis of Illinois, and three grandchildren.

Burial will be private in Cypress Hill Memorial Park, Petaluma.

GRACE M. ROBERTS

Funeral for Grace M. Roberts, a 35-year resident of San Rafael, will be held at 11 a.m. tomorrow in the First Methodist Church of San Rafael.

Mrs. Roberts died yesterday in a local hospital after a brief illness. She was 72. She was born in North Dakota.

Her husband, the late Bert Roberts, was a San Rafael city employee until his death in 1952.

She is survived by one sister, Margaret Schwager of San Rafael, and a daughter, Violet DuPont of Grants Pass, Ore.

Friends may call at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael, until 9 a.m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery.

ECONOMY

as the administration had hoped.

Such key government officials as Kenneth Rush, President Nixon's chief economic adviser, and Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board had predicted a small "plus" in economic growth in the preceding three months.

The figures also show how badly the nation is being victimized by inflation. The "minus" growth rate actually means that rising prices in April-June wiped out the total increase in the value of all goods and services produced during that three-month period.

There is sure to be new controversy over whether the nation has undergone the second recession of the Nixon presidency.

NIXON

St. Clair said, Nixon decided to make the new transcript available even though he previously had told the committee that he had given it "the full Watergate story."

St. Clair's summation ended 10 weeks of closed hearings by the 38-member committee on whether the evidence is sufficient to warrant Nixon's impeachment.

Next week the committee will begin debating whether to recommend impeachment with the vote now scheduled to occur by Saturday, July 27.

St. Clair told the committee earlier that it should not vote any articles of impeachment against the President.

St. Clair told reporters before beginning his arguments that although he has attended every hearing, heard every witness and seen all of the evidence collected by the committee's staff the past six months, there is no case for impeachment.

He still feels the Watergate allegations against Nixon to be "of primary importance," he said, but he would aim his defense at all of the allegations, including the ITT case, milk producers' contribution and the plumbers activities.

St. Clair said he had not discussed his planned defense with Nixon. "It is a lawyer's function to argue a case and I intend to do so," he said.

The committee will hold a series of closed briefings, including one Saturday, to weigh the thousands of pages of evidence and testimony leading to a decision next week whether it should recommend to the full House that Nixon be impeached.

INTO CUSTODY IN FLORIDA

Thomas Knight, a 23-year-old paper plant employee in Miami, is led handcuffed out of the edge of the Everglades following his capture yesterday in the $50,000 extortion and slaying of the company's president and his wife. The incident started yesterday morning when he abducted Sydney Gans, 64, from the plant, forced him to drive to his Key Biscayne Bay Island home to pick up his wife, Lillian, 60, and then to a Miami bank for the money. Knight then forced Gans to drive to the edge of the Everglades where he killed Gans and his wife. He then fled into the brush area where he was captured several hours later. (UPI Telephoto)

Study Recommends Legalized Pot

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legalizing the possession and use of marijuana in California is "reasonable and realistic," a legislative study has concluded.

The Senate Select Committee on Control of Marijuana suggested that first-time offenders, at the worst, be treated like speeding motorists and cited for a legal "infraction."

"Marijuana use is not a threat to public health, safety or morals so as to warrant state intrusion," the committee said in its 121-page report released yesterday.

The committee, chaired by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, began its study a year ago and based its findings on three public hearings, cooperation of "outstanding citizens" and previously published research.

Moscone unsuccessfully sought a softening of marijuana penalties earlier this year.

Among 21 conclusions drawn by the committee was that marijuana laws were "dishonest" and cost taxpayers more than a half billion dollars to enforce over the past 14 years.

While the committee suggested a "program of decriminalization" for simple use or possession of marijuana by adults, it recommended criminal penalties for growing, transporting or selling the weed. It also said the government should concentrate on arresting large-scale pushers.

Similar proposals were put forth in 1972 by the National Commission of Marijuana and Drug Abuse.

California currently allows legal authorities discretion whether to charge first-time offenders with either a felony or a misdemeanor, with penalties up to a year in jail or 10 years in prison and fines up to $20,000.

To support its recommendations, the committee concluded marijuana use has reached "epidemic" levels and is likely here to stay, clogging courts, causing disrespect for the laws and endangering the rights of privacy.

"It was found the most serious cost of criminalization of marijuana is it makes felons of a large segment of our population, especially our youth," the report said.

The study was expected to be the basis of renewed efforts in the legislature next year to reduce marijuana penalties.

The committee said enforcement of marijuana laws since 1960 has cost Californians $577 million.

Nationwide, the appetite for marijuana has given rise to a $835 million a year smuggling industry, where profits are sufficient to employ 280,000 persons in legitimate retail selling, the report said. It was estimated four tons of marijuana must be imported every day to keep up with the demand.

Appearances Board Members Named

Five persons have been named to Sausalito's Community Appearances Advisory Board and Recreation Commission.

Mayor Evert H. Heynneman announced Tuesday the appointment of Virginia Merrill and Byron Meyer to the advisory board, replacing Charles Merrill Jr. and Marshall Roath, and the reappointment of Paul Leffingwell.

Chess Tourney This Weekend

A five-round Swiss-system, United States Chess Federation-rated chess tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Terra Linda Recreation Center, 670 Del Ganado Road.

Registration ends at 9 a.m. Saturday, according to Jerry Frazier, president of the Redwood Empire Chess Association and tournament director.

Prizes (ranging up to $300) will be increased if there are more than 100 entires, he siad. Players should bring their own chess sets, clocks and pencils.

Sewer System Protests Heard

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

About a dozen Stinson Beach residents turned out last night, three of them to protest, at a key hearing on a proposal that their community be forced to build a sewerage system without voter approval.

The three, speaking against the proposal by the Regional Water Quality Control Board, claimed an upgraded septic tank system could eliminate health problems posed by failing tanks.

The Bay Area Sewage Services Agency, which held the hearing since it would be the one to carry out the regional board's proposal, deferred action to its Aug. 21 meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Hotel Claremont, Berkeley.

Last night's hearing was at Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge in Mill Valley.

Only two of the agency's 21 directors commented at the end of the hearing, both favoring the sort of conventional system Stinson Beach voters rejected in a March election. Opponents of the $2.5 million system objected it would encourage excessive growth.

Mark B. DiDuca, an agency director and Los Gatos city councilman, said the cost of upgrading and maintaining septic tanks would be greater than building a community treatment system. Continuing with septic tanks, he declared, "may just be prolonging a problem." A treatment system, he said, "solves the problem once and for all."

The vice chairman of the agency, San Leandro Mayor Jack D. Maltester, seconded DiDuca's remarks, terming them "words of wisdom."

Spokesmen for the William Kent Estate Co., developer of Seadrift, also called for a conventional treatment system. The company's vice president, Robert P. Danielson, noted that the exclusive subdivision has about half the community's assessed valuation.

The company's engineer, Paul Tanner, added that the March ballot measure was defeated by residents of the community, while it was supported by a majority of property owners — many of whom live and vote elsewhere.

Strong support for a treatment system also came from Marin's health officer, Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, who cited evidence of sewage escaping from septic tanks to surface on the ground.

A sanitary enginner for the regional board, Lawrence P. Kolb, added that a county survey had found 21 per cent of the septic tanks failing in the town's old residential area. Stinson Creek, which flows through the community, is "grossly polluted" and "a serious public health hazard" because of contamination from failing septic tanks, Kolb declared.

Even new septic tanks on Seadrift pose a pollution threat, he said, because the soil there is too porous to remove pollution before wastewater from them reaches the ocean and Seadrift and Bolinas lagoons.

Tanner objected that no pollution has been found in constant checks of Seadrift Lagoon, and Kolb did not respond.

A member of the Stinson Beach County Water District board, Andrea DeMarco, testified that pressure to build a sewerage system resulted from the county's failure to police the community's septic tank system.

A letter from the president of the district board, Proctor P. Jones, said a study will be completed in November to show how to upgrade the present septic tank system.

One of the three private citizens to speak, Bruce Wachtel, said the county's new septic tank ordinance will take care of many of the past problems of septic tank failures. The ordinance also requires maintenance of the tanks for the first time, he said.

Another resident, Michael Sanford, challenged the adequacy of Kolb's data. The county's survey of septic tanks was too limited and ignored the likelihood that some failed because of simple mechanical reasons that could be corrected easily, he said.

The case for septic tanks also was backed by a Seadrift resident, Daniel J. Lennon.

Additional correspondence on the issue will be accepted through the end of this month, the agency said.

The regional board not only has banned new septic tanks, but has ordered removal of all existing ones by October, 1977.

Directors of BASSA two months ago hired engineering and financial consultants to look into the issue. The agency has the power to build a sewerage system and bill residents and property owners without their vote of approval. It never has used the power, however.

Texas Gambler Wins $440,000

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Two casinos where a mysterious, wealthy Texan gambled this week don't know who he was, but they sure know he was there.

According to casino executives, the Texan arrived on a private jet plane Monday and started playing craps at the Horseshoe Casino.

By midnight he had won $80,000. He took that over to the Union Plaza Casino and won another $250,000, making bets of up to $60,000.

Then, they said, eight hours later, he returned to the Horseshoe, won $110,000 more, took his $440,000 total winnings, returned to the airport and flew back to Texas Tuesday night.

Weatherman Picnic Is Rained Out

Prosecutor Returns To Quiet Life

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Archibald Cox, the man hired and fired by President Nixon as special Watergate prosecutor, has eased back into the role that seems to suit him best — a professor, not prosecutor, of law, at Harvard.

Cox, a victim of what has come to be called the "Saturday Night Massacre" last October, spends his days now grading law papers and lecturing to his students, extolling with occasional sermonettes the virtues of fairness and reason. Life for Cox goes on almost as before.

With a few exceptions.

Like the lingering stares he gets when he pedals across campus on his bicycle, his tired insistence that no, he cannot discuss Watergate, and the wonder, now, that he could have been the center of a hurricane of national controversy over a major government shakeup.

Cox seems to have made a studied attempt to run his life with the courtly, Yankee good humor and the slight eccentricities that make him such a distinctive campus figure.

He still drives a pickup truck to Harvard Law School.

He still gets panned in student reviews of his teaching style.

He still wears his narrow lapel, slope shoulder suits and buttondown shirts. And in a time of wide ties, fat bows or none at all, he still wears his skinny bow ties.

Above it all, there is the talk of fair play and civility that he dwelled on before he became special prosecutor and that he dwells on now. It is the theme of his public speeches.

For instance, in his Phi Beta Kapa oration at Harvard this spring, Cox compard the tactics of the Senate Watergate committee to those of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in the

Corte Madera Memorial Fund

A group of Corte Madera residents has established a special fund to purchase a memorial for former town mayor Edward W. Colthurst who died earlier this month.

Contributions will be received through Aug. 15, according to Shirley Walker, a member of the group. Representatives of civic groups and members of Colthurst's family will then select a memorial to be placed in the town park, she said.

The committee or its staff "leaks the result of incomplete investigation, gives out the accusatory inferences it draws from secret testimony and even releases proposed findings of guilt upon men under indictment . . ." Cox said.

Cox is a liberal. But in his concern for his favorite virtues, he avoids some of the popular liberal causes.

In a speech at Brandeis University, he linked together as part of the same phenomenon, takeovers of buildings by students, bombings, draft record destruction, Daniel Ellsberg's disclosure of the Pentagon papers and Egil Krogh's planning of the break-in of Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office.

"In each case, the actor believed his wrong to be justified by the righteousness of his cause and the need for drastic means to achieve his ends," Cox said.

"Only the spirit that is not too sure it is right speaks for the values of civility and reason."

Some have wondered whether it was Cox himself or simply the emotion of the times and concern over the prosecutor's office that contributed to the vocal outpouring last October when he was fired.

Cox seems content, for the time being, to continue as a professor — an occupation that has filled the time between forays into federal government law. The most notable of those, until last year, was a term during the Kennedy administration as solicitor general.

He maintains there is nothing for him in elective politics. "I have neither the desire nor the intention to run for office," he says in a tone that makes it clear he's repeated it enough to get it letter-perfect.

Faculty scuttlebutt has had it for years that Cox would have been appointed to the Supreme Court if President John F. Kennedy had lived. Now, that talk has started again with speculation that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., might become president.

Though deluged with requests for appearances, Cox has confined his speaking to Harvard affairs, four commencements, three or four established legal lectures and an appearance for Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz. But he does occasionally grant interviews in his tiny, book-lined office in a modern law school building.

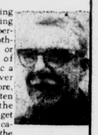

Chess Master To Hold Class

Chess master Roy Hoppe will conduct a seven-week seminar for beginning, intermediate and advanced players beginning July 31 at the Larkspur Library.

Sessions will include lectures and practice games and will be Wednesdays at 7 p.m.

CALLING ALL CAMERA FANS
By Ken Reichard
Take a Friend Along When you Travel

When going on an exciting vacation, perhaps to another country or a part of America you've never visited before, travelers often yield to the impulse to get that new camera for the trip, so they can take really good pictures.

Well, a better camera may be a good idea for you . . . but not at the last minute. If you have to worry about handling strange equipment, pressing the right buttons, remembering how to load and unload, etc., you won't be able to concentrate on the scenery around you or the happy task of capturing it on film.

That's why we say, "Take a friend along." We mean that you should know your equipment ahead of time. Take a camera you're thoroughly familiar with, so that you handle it with ease. Don't experiment now with new films, filters, etc., either. This is the real trip, not a trial run . . . and you can't go back again.

If you want a better camera for the trip, see us way ahead of time . . . and practice, practice, practice! Remember, we have everything in photographic needs, for home or away, and a readiness to serve you.

Sewer Replacement Postponed By Cost

Appalled that bids for a sewer replacement project were twice what city officials thought the job would cost, the Larkspur City Council last night decided to postpone the project for a year.

City staff had estimated the replacement of 2,000 feet of sewer on Niven Way would cost $60,000 but three contractors who sought the project submitted bids from $126,390 to $133,499.

"I am at a complete loss to explain the high bids except escalation in construction costs," City Mgr. Harlan Barry told councilmen.

They unanimously agreed to reject all bids and said they will seek new bids next spring, adding money in next year's budget to this year's $60,000, which will be carried over.

The Larkspur City Council Also:

SIGN — Were told that city staff this week will install a stop sign on Doherty Drive where it meets Lucky Drive to help alleviate traffic problems at the entrance to the Redwood High School parking lot.

POLLUTION — Asked staff to prepare a resolution asking regulation of "indirect, stationary sources of air pollution," such as shopping centers and housing tracts, by the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District. Councilman Alfred J. Malvino objected to the resolution which was the suggestion of San Anselmo Mayor Martin G. Blinder.

WEEDS — Ordered Walter Lerner, 135 Riviera Circle, and Paul W. Cane, 427 Riviera Circle, to remove overgrown weeds from their vacant lots within 15 days. The weeds are a fire hazard and must be cleared a distance of 20 feet from adjacent property, city fire officials told councilmen.

PIPER — Approved the master plan for Piper Park which shows tennis courts, picnic areas, open play areas, a ballfield, observation points on Corte Madera Creek, horseshoe pits, restrooms, parking and a small boat launching ramp for the 25-acre site off Doherty Drive.

DRAKE — Certified as complete the environmental impact report on a project to widen East Sir Francis Drake Boulevard.

SURVIVAL — Gave $500 to Survival Inc. to continue recycling efforts in the city and to open another depot.

PARKS — Agreed that funds from the statewide park bond measure should be used for Piper Park and the waterfront park along East Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. Councilmen agreed funds should be split 50 per cent for the county and 50 per cent for cities but asked that funds given to community service areas and districts be taken from the county's share rather than from the cities' share as previously planned.

STREETS — Awarded a contract for city street resurfacing to Forde Construction Co. of Greenbrae for $37,125. Councilmen deleted some gutter and curb work on Acacia Avenue from the project so that Forde's low bid of $41,309.55 could be trimmed to meet project estimates. Other bidders were Ghilotti Brothers Inc. of San Rafael, $49,545; Thornton Paving Co. of San Rafael, $42,809.60; and Bresnan-Dalecio Inc. of San Rafael, $47,985.

UTILITY — Appointed Councilman Robert H. Lee to serve on a Local Agency Formation Commission advisory committee.

REPORT — Were told that its existing citizens advisory committee will work with consultants in preparing an environmental impact report on development of San Quentin Peninsula and asked residents interested in serving on the committee to contact Planning Director John E. Roberto.

CONTRACT — Renewed for one year its contract with the California Highway Patrol for the removal of abandoned vehicles.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to Aug. 7 at 8 p.m. in city hall.

Budget Is Approved By Trustees

A $2.5 million 1974-75 budget has been approved for publication by trustees of the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District.

The budget is larger than last year's $2.3 million budget, according to Supt. James H. Davidson, because of teacher salary increases and inflation in the cost of books and supplies.

Davidson said he expects the district tax rate to increase from last year's $2.25 per $100 of assessed property value to about $2.45.

Although the district's total assessed valuation is expected to jump from last year's $26 million to about $39 million, he said, the tax rate increase is necessary because the hike in total assessed value will prompt the state to reduce its financial assistance to the district, leaving local property owners with a greater share of the burden.

A public hearing on the budget will be held at 8 p.m. Aug. 6 at the district office in the Rohnert Park City Hall.

Festival Visitor Was Unexpected

GAYLORD, Mich. (AP) — Otsego County sheriff's deputies have run a visitor to Gaylord's annual "Alpenfest" out of town.

The guest, a young buck deer, wandered through town about noon.

He nosed open the rear door of the local chamber of commerce office and made himself comfortable while chamber officials conducted a business conference.

Deputies escorted the visitor to the city limits.

Error Forces Larkspur Budget Cut

Larkspur city councilmen last night faced up to a $3 million error by the county assessor in estimating the city's assessed valuation and trimmed over $43,000 from the city's 1974-75 budget.

City Mgr. Harlan Barry told councilmen the assessors in March had estimated the city's valuation at $52.5 million and Barry prepared a $1.8 million budget in May based on property tax revenues expected from that valuation. Councilmen held two hearings on the budget and approved it.

But the assessor failed to reassess the Bon Air area and property east of Highway 101 as planned because of a shortage of staff and the actual assessment came to only $49.8 million necessitating trimming $43,000 from the budget.

"We sat down, went through all our budget hearings and now the assessor says, 'Sorry fellas, you've got $3 million less to play with,'" protested Mayor Joan L. Sestak.

"If any area should be reassessed... it should be that (Bon Air) area," added Councilman Robert H. Lee.

The Larkspur Town Meeting steering committee yesterday joined councilmen in the protest by writing a letter to the assessor's office saying the explanation of a shortage of staff causing fewer reassessments "raises serious questions about the professionalism of that office."

No one appeared before the council last night to protest, however, and councilmen begrudgingly made these cuts, recommended by Barry:

Defer hiring temporary planning department help, $2,586; reduce staff training program, $600; defer assigning a police juvenile sergeant and delete hiring an extra patrolman, $13,588; delete a projector and radio scanner, $1,015; defer replacing a fireman to fill fire inspector position, $5,880; defer hiring a mechanic, $2,865; delete an equipment trailer, $3,500; delete tennis court resurfacing at Larkspur-Corte Madera School, $6,000; reduce library book budget, $2,500; and assign one third of public works director salary to sanitary district budget, $6,834.

The cuts, when coupled with money budgeted for projects during 1973-74 but not spent, leaves the 1974-75 spending program at $2,011,583.

The budget would leave the tax rate unchanged at $1.98 per $100 assessed valuation for Larkspur (which is in the Larkspur Sanitary District) and $1.48 for Greenbrae (which is in the Ross Valley Sanitary District), Barry said.

Bill To Promote Recycling Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Commerce Committee has approved a bill to promote the use of recycled materials and regulate waste disposal practices.

As an example of what could be accomplished, the committee said a doubling of the percentage of discarded aluminum that is recycled would save 2 million barrels of oil a year.

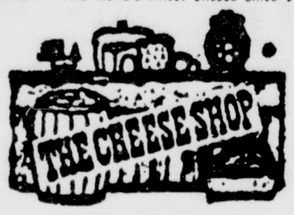

The Environmental Protection Agency would be authorized to establish standards to eliminate unsafe waste disposal practices and to prevent depletion of natural resources.

PLENTY OF PLACES TO PLAY

What better way to spend a leisurely summer day than a trip to the new neighborhood playground which these youngsters seem to be enjoying. The unusual playground equipment was designed by Jay Beckwith of San Francisco. The park, located just off Tiburon Boulevard near Blackie's Pasture, was a joint project of the City of Tiburon and the Belveron Homeowners Association. The city contributed the money — $4,000 — and the homeowners donated the labor, according to Donald Batten, president of the association.

New Move Made To Buy Old Home In Belvedere

An effort to raise money to buy an old Belvedere home for a recreation center died this week, but another, to buy it for a cultural center was born.

Belvedere Councilman Thomas Price reported that he and three other residents have backed out of a deal to buy the 60-year-old home, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fleming Jr.

This group had hoped to buy the home and to persuade the City of Belvedere to buy the property back from them in the future, but the city council failed to come up with a promise.

However, at a Tuesday meeting of residents and city officials, some members of the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society said they would like to acquire the property as a society headquarters.

Belvere resident Stevens Manning Jr., said that he then offered to try to form a real estate partnership of 10 Belvedere businessmen who will put up $10,000 each and borrow more funds to buy the $225,000 property immediately. They would hold the house for six months, Manning said, until the landmarks society could raise funds to buy it back.

Manning said he has found seven partners already.

However, the Flemings have received another offer on the home from a private party. If this deal goes through, the real estate partnership will not have a chance to buy the home.

The house, designed by architect Albert Farr, was first the clubhouse for a private golf course and later became a private home. It stands with its tennis court, swimming pool and garden on 1.12 acres near the intersection of Britton Lane and Golden Gate Avenue.

Landmarks society members said at the meeting that the property would be used for offices and storage space for them, for meetings and for concerts.

Report Found Lacking By Tiburon Planners

A bulky report on how Sequoia Pacific's proposed downtown Tiburon development will affect the peninsula community's way of life was tried and found wanting last night.

City planning commissioners, in the fifth such public hearing, scrutinized a preliminary environmental impact report and identified five deficiencies:

The report fails to project how many tourists and others will visit the $18 million project, and how they will affect the city.

It doesn't explain how it decided the project will need 500 parking spaces.

It gives incomplete treatment to present noise levels in downtown Tiburon and how the project will change them.

It does not measure the impact of trucks bringing in fill materials if a proposed marina is scrapped, thus making some local fill unavailable.

It does not adequately consider how inflation and other economic uncertainties will affect the project.

Sequoia Pacific, a partner of Southern Pacific Railroad, the landowner, has proposed condominiums, offices, shops, an inn and conference center, marina, a city hall, parks and open space on the 38 acres.

The commission's criticisms will be forwarded to Madrone Associates of San Rafael, the consultant that oversaw preparation of the report, for inclusion in a final draft of the document.

A sixth and final hearing on the impact report will be at 8 p.m. July 31 at city hall. In an Aug. 14 meeting, the commission is expected to adopt the report and send it to the city council for consideration Aug. 26.

Planning commissioners also will meet at 8 p.m. July 29 to review the 1970 downtown plan and decide if it needs updating in light of the Sequoia Pacific proposal and other development plans.

Mother Arranges Funerals Before Slaying Children

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Hazel Johnston wrote a letter to a mortician ordering four funerals and telling him to contact the family minister, the Rev. Harold Hudson.

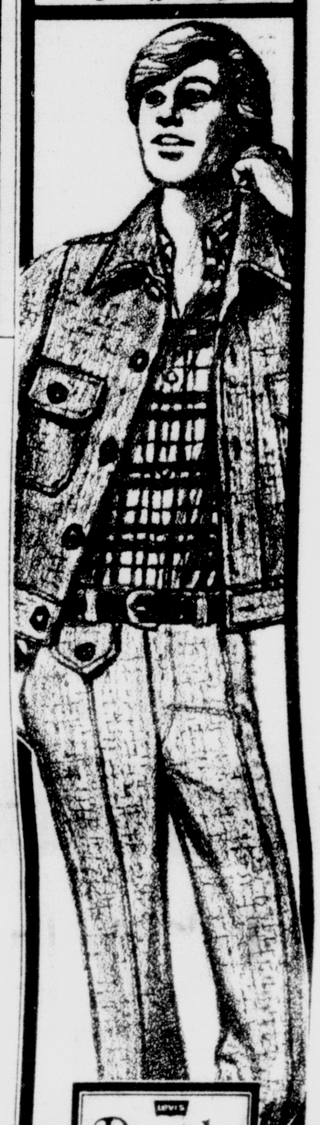

When officials of the Hardade Krass Funeral Home received the letter yesterday they called Hudson, who went to the Johnston home and found the bodies of Mrs. Johnston, 32, her children, Laana Michell, 6, Cynthia Yvonne, 4, and Olin Clinton, 12.

All four lay on a bed in the one-story home. The children's burial clothes were carefully laid out in the living room.

Police said the children apparently had been shot as they slept about 9 p. m. Tuesday and Mrs. Johnston then shot herself with the .38- caliber revolver. The letter had been mailed Tuesday.

FORD
More small cars have been bought at this sign than at any other sign in America.*
*Nobody knows more about small cars than Ford. Fact is, we've been building them since 1908, when we introduced the original Model T. That's why today Ford can offer the right kinds of small cars . . . in the right sizes . . . and at prices that make them the right kind of value, too. The result—over the last five years, your Ford Dealers have sold more small cars than any other dealers in America. By "small," we mean cars with wheelbases under 112.0 inches.

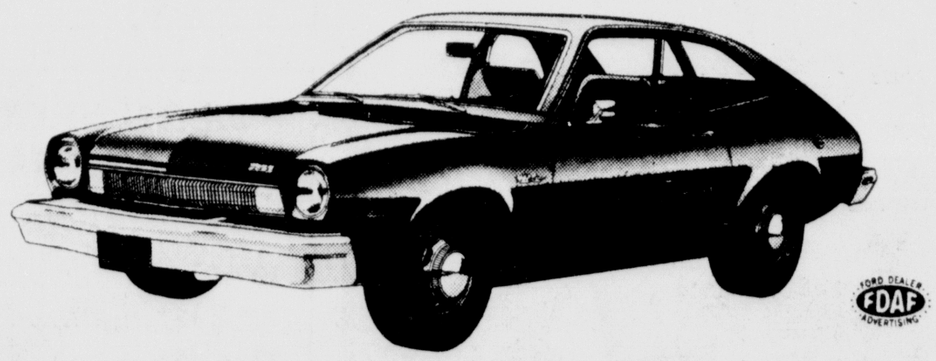

Ford Mustang II
The Right Car At The Right Time
An all-new car designed to meet the needs of 1974. For example, Mustang II gives you a choice of two economical engines: a standard 4 and optional V-6. Yet Mustang II is a little jewel. Never before have we put such luxury and comfort, quality and elegance into one small package. And it's even smaller than last year's Mustang. With all this and the impressive list of standard features, the base sticker price is surprisingly low.

Ford Maverick
The Family Compact Ford Maverick has always been the family car with an outstanding reputation for economy. And reliability. It's the compact car that's easy to service, easy to park, easy to handle and definitely easy on gas (regular gas). Thanks to its standard 200-cubic-inch, 6-cylinder engine. Ford Maverick, the compact car we build for families.

Ford Pinto
America's Basic Economy Car
Our back-to-basics, little economy car. Pinto's thrifty 2000 cc, 4-cylinder engine was designed to take you a long way on a little gas. You'll find everything about the Pinto is simple. Durable. Basic. With standard equipment like front disc brakes and rack and pinion steering. Maybe best of all, Pinto carries an exceptionally low sticker price. And what could be more basic than that?

College Instructors Declare Pay Impasse

Teachers in the Marin Community College District have declared an impasse in their negotiations for raises.

Dr. John A. Grasham, district superintendent, said district trustees were informed of the stalemate last night and agreed to begin "fact-finding" procedures as outlined in district policy.

The Certificated Employees Council, which represents teachers, and trustees each will name one person to a fact-finding panel and those two members will then select a third. Trustees set aside $5,000 from district reserves to hire their representative.

The panel will then study the salary issue, hold hearings and report back to both sides. Grasham said the committee would probably make its report by the end of September and trustees will act on raises in October.

At last night's meeting, trustee Frances Compton sounded a note of warning for teachers, according to Earlene Jones, district publicist.

"There is a very real possibility that any salary increase whatever might not be retroactive," Mrs. Compton said.

Grasham said this is the first year that a certificated employees' council was formed to represent teachers in salary negotiations and he said it is the first time fact-finding has been required.

Trustees will hold a closed session today at 4 p.m. in the board room at College of Marin to appoint its representative for the fact-finding panel. They then will meet in open session to adopt a publication budget for 1974-75.

Marin Community College District Board Also:

TEACHERS — Hired Jacquenlyn Z. Bowers, music teacher, College of Marin, $13,386 per year; Robert W. Ellsion, art, College of Marin, $12,966 per year, and Dr. Manus Monroe, chemistry teacher, Indian Valley Colleges, $13,164.

PARTTIME — Authorized continued employment for parttime teachers Jose Mendez, Virginia Havel, Martha Ayers and Mattie Knighten and were told that continued employment of parttime teachers probably won't qualify those teachers for tenure in the district.

REDEVELOPMENT — Authorized extension through Jan. 20, 1975, of an agreement with the Town of Corte Madera concerning possible suits over the town's redevelopment project.

LEGAL — Authorized the county counsel to file suit against Corwin Booth and Associated Architects and general contractor Ralph N. Larson over problems with heating and ventilating in the new Harlan and Science centers at the College of Marin. Costs of repair may run as high as $389,000, trustees were told.

INDIAN — Approved preparation of working drawings for an Olympic size swimming pool, locker-shower facilities and two physical education activity rooms about the size of regular classrooms at Indian Valley Colleges.

POSITION — Approved hiring an administrative assistant for the office of instruction at College of Marin.

Suit Is Filed Against Police

The Larkspur Police Department and officer Eugene Adrian were charged with brutality against a 16-year-old Larkspur boy in a $100,000 damage suit filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

The suit said Adrian kicked Daniel Lytle, of 18 Owlswood Road, and beat him in the head with a flashlight at the Larkspur Marina last Oct. 26.

The action, filed by San Rafael attorney George D. Vaughn, also seeks an unspecified amount of medical expense.

Machinists Strike Talks Broken Off

Negotiations in the 18-day-old machinists strike against Marin County automotive dealers and garages have broken off and no date is set for more talks, a union spokesman said today.

Les Young, business agent for Machinists Local 238 in San Rafael said today that about 40 of the 125 union auto shops in Marin are operating under interim contracts. The rest are closed down, he said.

Marin new car dealers — whose own employees are picketing the agencies in most cases — reported today that there has been no violence in the county.

The Marin County shops that are open either have agreed to make any eventual pay settlement retroactive to July 1 — when the strike began — or already are paying the amounts sought by the union, the machinists' spokesman said.

A member of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service sat in on the talks last week, but the negotiations hit a roadblock over pay adjustments for cost of living and benefits.

The Machinists Local 238 strike against the McNear Co. continued at the brickyards on Point San Pedro, after a one-day interruption.

Robert Thomas, McNear Co. president, said the union pulled its pickets off the brickyard gates last Friday, and kept them off during a negotiating session Monday.

Corte Madera Councilmen Vote Themselves Pay Hike

Corte Madera town councilmen last night granted themselves a 5 per cent pay raise as they continued review of the town's proposed 1974-75 budget of $1.4 million.

Frank Bigley, town treasurer, said the pay raise was approved over the objection of Councilman Jana G. Haehl who felt salaries should not be increased. He said town staff had recommended the increase.

It will raise councilmen's salaries from $180 to $189 per month.

Councilmen also boosted their fund for conferences and training from $2,000 to $3,000.

City Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels' car allowance was increased from $1,500 last year to $1,800. Bartels does not drive a town car but receives an allowance for using his own car for town business.

Councilmen had previously indicated they would hold a bond election in March to finance purchase of open space and last night added $3,000 to the budget to cover that election.

Several accounts were reviewed and unchanged by councilmen. They were: recreation, $60,683; library, $82,318; priority allocations (reserves), $30,000; retirement, $106,366; finance, $32,938; planning, $17,102; building inspection and zoning, $24,450, and debt service, $15,483.

The changes leave the proposed budget at $1,440,915, an increase of $5,617 over this year's spending which would require an unchanged tax rate of $1.37 per $100 assessed valuation.

Councilmen will hold another hearing on the budget today at 7:30 p.m. in town hall.

Board Votes Budget In Lagunitas

The Lagunitas School District board last night approved a $719,552 publication budget for 1974-75.

Before approving the budget, trustees transferred $10,000 from the operating budget into the general reserve fund to supplement the $53,000 already held in undistributed reserves.

Supt. Harry F. Roche said the budget will require a projected tax rate of $4.08 per $100 of assessed valuation, down 20 cents from the last fiscal year's tax rate.

The final budget will be adopted Aug. 1.

The board also approved a resolution to support a "one-school" concept in which there will be more interaction and unity between the district's three instructional programs, "open classroom," advanced "basic capabilities" and the "academic plus program."

Trustees plan to schedule meetings in September to determine how more inter-program interaction and unity can be achieved.

Another action the board took was to transfer 26 children in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades enrolled in the open classroom program at San Geronimo Elementary School to Lagunitas School to be with their peers.

The board next meets at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 1 in Lagunitas School.

Radiation: A Cancer Cause To Smokers?

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Low-level, naturally occurring radiation found in tobacco smoke may be the main cause of lung cancer among cigarette users, a John Hopkins University professor said yesterday.

In a paper prepared for delivery today at the 5th International Conference of Radiation, Dr. Edward P. Radford said polonium-210 and its parent, lead-210, are found in tobacco smoke.

And, he added, increased for delivery Thursday at the 5th International Conference of Radiation, Dr. Edward P. Radford said polonium-210 and its parent, lead-210 are found in tobacco smoke.

And, he added, increased polonium activity is found in the bronchial tissue of cigarette smokers.

"We have thus postulated that polonium alpha radiation may be a significant cancer initiator in cigarette-induced bronchial cancer," he said.

Tar and nicotine heretofore have been blamed as the primary causes of lung cancer in cigarette smokers.

Radford, a professor of environmental medicine in the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health, said the evidence points to the need for a closer study of the effects of low-level alphia radiation emanating from nuclear power plants such as those now operating or under construction.

"Exposure to alpha-omitting radon daughters is now firmly established as increasing the risk of bronchial cancer among a number of underground miners," he said.

The assessment of the importance of cigarette-induced bronchial cancer depends on a comparison of smokers with these miners.

"Current data probably underestimate the local does from polonium decay in smokers," he said. "Nevertheless, with reasonable assumptions, it appears that polonium decay as the initiator accounts for a substantial fraction, if not all, of cigarette-induced lung cancer in males."

Radford said lung cancer each year kills about 65 males out of 100,000 and about 12 females out of 100,000. The rate for women, he added is increassing rapidly.

Radford's studies of polonium in the lungs of cigarette smokers suffering from cancer began in the 1960s when he was at Harvard University.

Subsequently, he combined his research with that of Edward Martell of the National Center for Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo., who had been studying possible sources of radiation in tobacco.

Radford said the evidence showed that lead 210 naturally occurs in the environment and accumulates on the hairs of tobacco leaves, especially those grown on the east coast of the United States, the principal tobacco-raising area in the world.

Lead 210 has a half life of about 20 years and constantly is being transmuted in part into polonium 210 which has a half life of about 138 days. He said that it appears lead 210 can be removed from tobacco by scrubbing or some other process.

He also said that the danger of contracting lung cancer decreases after a smoker quits because the body has time to expel the radioactive matrial and time heals damage done to tissue.

New Radio Telephone Utility Will Allow People To Be Paged

A new radio telephone utility (RTU), which will allow individuals to be paged anywhere in Marin County, will begin operating on Aug. 1.

The service will be provided by United Radiophone System, operated in conjunction with United Telephone Answering Service, owned by Angelo Turrini at 914 Irwin Street in San Rafael.

A subscriber to the service will get a pocket pager, a small device that a person can carry in his pocket, which will page him by tone or by a voice message within a 60-mile radius of San Rafael. Heretofore, the only pocket paging service was available on a limited radio system reserved exclusively for the medical profession.

The new service will operate on Channel 22, a clear channel serving Marin County only. Eventually the channel will be coordinated and operate through a computer center in San Francisco to interchange service with the five other Bay Area radio telephone utilities in San Francisco, Oakland, San Mateo, Palo Alto and San Jose.

Orders for pocket pagers are being taken by United Radiophone System. Two-way automobile telephones will be available on the same channel beginning Sept. 1.

VINCENT WHITNEY COMPANY of Sausalito, manufacturers of the Whitco handpowered residential-commercial dumbwaiters for nearly 50 years, has been granted exclusive Bay Area rights to sell, service and install the Butler electric dumbwaiter by the Flinchbaugh-Murray Corporation of York, Pa.

ROBERT N. TALBOTT, sales manager of Vincent Whitney, announced that residential use of the dumbwaiter increased dramatically because of the popularity of condominiums and other multi-level homes. Commercially, dumbwaiters are used in restaurants, offices and retail stores.

The fully automatic Butler dumbwaiter can truly "give housework a lift", said Talbott.

LES SCHER, attorney and author, will be in Mill Valley this Saturday to autograph his new book, "Finding and Buying Your Place in the Country." He will be at the Mill Valley Book Depot in Lytton Square from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Scher lived in Marin in 1972 while writing his book and now lives in Garberville. The book, published in May, is a Book of the Month Club selection.

REDWOOD TIRE CENTER will hold its grand opening this Saturday at 13 San Clemente Drive in Corte Madera, next to North Bay Lumber.

CREDIT MOTORS used car sales in San Rafael is back at its former location at 625 Grand Avenue, where the old barn-like structure stands next to the Grand Avenue bridge.

Owned by Herb Lucas of Corte Madera, Credit Motors was founded in 1967 on Fourth Street in San Rafael, moved to 625 Grand Avenue, and then to 1000 Francisco Boulevard where it operated for the past two and one-half years.

Lucas decided to move back to 625 Grand Avenue last month. Credit Motors specializes in bank repossessions, consigned cars, camper type trailers, and vans.

WILLIAMS CUTLERY at 120 Strawberry Town & Country Village in Mill Valley will have factory representatives on hand tomorrow and Saturday to conduct a Remington Shaver repair clinic. Hours will be 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

NO MORE FLATS!

Ed Gomberg of Synair Corporation wants to take the air out of your tires. Synair has introduced a process that converts any bicycle tire, new or used, to an airless design. The conversion is done through bicycle shops and other retail outlets, which use special equipment to inject a newly developed compound called BykFil into the tire tube or casing. The compound completely replaces the air and cures to a soft, resilient rubber, which can withstand glass, nails and other debris without going flat.

Investors Back To Activity On Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — With hopes of some favorable economic news, investors came off the sidelines today and pushed prices higher in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Although some uncertainty remained on Wall Street, many investors went bargain hunting in light of reports the government would report favorable economic news during the day, particularly concerning the gross national product.

But a UPI report indicated this rise would not be as great as expected.

Baltimore Gas & Electric was the most active issue, off ¼ at 14 ⅜ on 188,100 shares, including a block of 179,900 shares at 14.

Chemicals and oils prospered. Dupont gained 1 ¾, Schlumberger 1 ⅞, Halliburton 1 ¾ and Superior Oil 1 ¼.

Prices were higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. Syntex was the most active issue, up ¼ at 43 on 16,300 shares.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Pacific Power Weak; Others Look Good

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. I hold 323 shares of McDonnel Douglas (NYSE) at $20, 500 Pacific Power & Light (NYSE) at $23 and 5000 Republic Corp. (NYSE) at $2. Would you comment please? — P.A.

A. Republic Corp. has restructured its debt position, reduced expenses and discontinued certain unprofitable operations. The effect of these moves was apparent in nine-month (through April) operating results. Earnings on continuing operations were 24 cents per share compared with 12 cents in the 1973 period (both figures exclude tax credits and extraordinary losses). While this diversified manufacturer has improved its outlook, the shares are still highly speculative but may be held for eventual workout. Conversely, Pacific Power & Light is of limited investment appeal except in income accounts. Without significant rate relief, earnings are expected to be below year earlier levels, reflecting higher costs and an increase in shares outstanding.

McDonnel Douglas shares could respond meaningfully, given an improved market atmosphere. MD, a leading aerospace/aircraft manufacturer, had a backlog of $3.6 billion (48 per cent commercial orders) at the end of the first quarter. Orders have been coming in at a good pace since that date. The company's F-4 and DC-9 models should make a substantial contribution to 1974 profits since development costs were expended previously. Hold for recovery.

Q. What is the significance of a price-earnings ratio? — J.S.

A. This figure, which results when a stock's price is divided by its earnings per share, is one of many aids used in assessing a stock's current value and future potential. In markets such as the present one, P/Es tend to drop — the Dow Industrial Average is currently trading at 9X projected earnings compared with 13X a year ago. Glamour stocks and certain industrial groups — drugs, electronics, etc. - historically have commanded larger P/Es than the more mundane and cyclical groups such as utilities, cements and textiles. Thus, in appraising an investment, you should look at this figure in terms of the stock's historical P/E levels and in relation to that of other issues in the same industry.

NEW NATURE STUDY CENTER

The finishing touches have been added to this new education center at the National Audubon Society's Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary in Tiburon, and the building will be dedicated next weekend. The center includes a classroom that will seat 100, office space and a new residence for the sanctuary manager who now lives in the Lyford-Dickey mansion on the sanctuary grounds. According to Mgr. Philip Schaeffer classes in the new building will start in the fall including programs for children and adults and free wildlife films on Sunday afternoons.

Fire Budget Is Set At $301,385

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire District board last night adopted a 1974-75 budget of $301,385, up $65,785 from last year.

Fire Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr. said the district tax rate would remain the same, 77.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Most of the increase stems from higher salary and insurance costs which total $255,560 in this year's budget, up about $56,000, Heynen said.

The salary category includes funds for an 8.5 per cent cost of living increase for the district's 15 employees. However, Heynen said the amount of the wage hike has not yet been agreed on in salary negotiations.

The budget also includes $35,000 for maintenance and $10,825 for capital improvements, which will include funds for hydrants, a radio and a new squad truck chassis.

Heynen said the budget will be funded by $236,440 in property tax revenues and about $65,000 from district reserves

Sonoma Fair Races Set Attendance, Bet Marks

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Attendance yesterday at the Sonoma County Fair horse races set new records, according to fair officials.

Altogether, 13,921 persons took advantage of the free admission, and they bet $650,740 on the quarterhorses, appaloosas and thoroughbreds. Both the attendance figures and the parimutuel total were new records for weekdays at the annual fair.

Encouraged by the turnout, the fair's management will offer free admission to the races again next Wednesday.

A western horse show will start off tomorrow's action, which also will include a talent show, a baking contest and other staples of rural fairs.

The complete schedule of fair events tonight and tomorrow includes:

TONIGHT

7:30 p.m. — Pat Andress dance review, Redwood Theaters.

8:30 p.m. — Redwood Theater review featuring Myron Floren, the Allen family and Clementi's.

TOMORROW

Noon — Midway opens.

1:20 p.m. — Post time for quarterhorse and appaloosa races.

2 p.m. — All American talent contest, Redwood Theater.

2:20 p.m. — Post time for thoroughbred races.

Hangings In Effigy Are Cowardly Acts

Anonymous criticism of our public officials, particularly the recent effigy hangings, has no place in an enlightened society. Such attacks are the work of cowardly individuals who hit and run without exposing themselves to cross examination and counterattack. They deserve no more recognition than the unsigned poison pen letters that are tossed into the wastepaper basket and forgotten.

Effigies, unfortunately, are not so easily ignored. They are rigged up behind the scenes and then hoisted in some promment location to attract considerable attention before they can be torn down and tossed into the trash heap where they belong.

THE INTENT OF the perpetrator may be merely to emphasize a point of view or let off steam in a graphic and humorous way, similar to cartoons that employ exaggeration to supply the intended punch. Unlike published cartoons, which are signed by the cartoonist or represent the views of the publication, these effigies are completely irresponsible, inflammatory without being enlightening, and appeal to the basest of human emotions. They are attempts by the perpetrator to accomplish through mob action what he cannot accomplish in open confrontation.

Members of the Fairfax City Council have been targets of these attacks on several occasions, including an effigy hanging last week. This week, a member of the Novato Unified School District was subjected to similar smear tactics.

IF CITIZENS WANT to strike out at their representatives, the way to do it is through regular channels — open discourse via written or verbal communication or at the ballot box.

Victims of these underhanded attacks are taking them in stride, shrugging them off as works of pranksters, but this makes the acts no less offensive.

We have enough violence on our streets and on television without a further assist from local hate mongers.

ANONYMOUS ATTACKS on our public officials through caricatures and effigies are distasteful, demeaning, and a discredit to a county whose citizens are quite capable of articulating their views without having cowards in hiding fanning the flames of hate and distrust.

Time For Mint Drinks

The coming hot days of Marin's late summer are the time for sprigs of mint in iced tea or sometimes stronger drink. Many of us have it growing in moist situations in our gardens. Mint has been used for centuries as a medicine for digestion. Even today most over-the-counter remedies for digestive complaints contain a judicous amount of oil of mint.

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Return Of Cross Filing Could Save Campaign Cost

By EARL G. WATERS

While gaining the Democratic nomination in June, Assemblyman John Knox of Contra Costa County assured his re-election by also winning a write-in campaign for the Republican nomination.

One other assemblyman, two congressmen and one state senator also are unopposed in November because no Republicans filed for their district in the primary.

Although Knox, who was elected at a special election in 1960 and has won handily at each successive election, performed a remarkable feat in becoming the nominee of both parties, time was when that was not uncommon.

THAT WAS BACK in the days of cross-filing. Under that system one could file as a candidate of both major parties and any others which might be around. On occasion such a candidate would win the opposite party nomination but fail to gain his own. This automatically disqualified him and the county central committee of the party whose nomination he had won had the privilege of appointing a candidate to take his place in the general election.

In those days a substantial number of congressmen and assemblymen were able to avoid the expense of a general election contest by winning both party nominations and usually more than half of the senators did likewise.

THE RECORDS SHOW that in 1958, the last year of cross-filing, five congressmen, 14 assemblymen and 18 senators were re-elected in the primary by winning the nominations of both parties.

But cross-filing went out in 1960 with the result that candidates now are put to the expense of a long dragged out campaign, starting with the primary in June and running through the general in November.

Still, like Knox, there have been the occasional exceptions where an incumbent gets lucky and either is unopposed or successfully wins both nominations through a write-in. In the 1960 election two congressmen, four assemblymen and one senator achieved this happy state. In 1962 it was three assemblymen and three senators while in 1964 one congressman and three assemblymen found themselves without opposition at the general.

NO ONE CARRIED it off in 1966 but in 1968 two assemblymen and one senator did and in 1970 only one assemblyman lucked out. In 1972 one congressman and three assemblymen were without general election opposition.

What Knox has done is again point up the fact that it is possible for a good candidate to win the favor of both parties despite the abolition of cross-filing. Knox did it without spending much money but presumably many more could do it by advancing large sums.

BUT IF THE public is sincerely concerned about campaign expenditures the costs of campaigning could be substantially reduced by shortening the time lapse between the primary and general elections and by returning to cross filing.

As election after election has proved in California, the people vote for the man rather than the party. This being so, electioneering costs could be greatly reduced by permitting the voters to vote for a candidate in the other party at the primary instead of waiting until the general to express their preference for that candidate.

THIS WOULD not only save candidates much money but there would also be a substantial savings to the public as well, by reason of having shorter ballots.

It would also tend to deemphasize the bitter partisanship which has developed in the legislature since the abolition of cross filing and has proved to be so disruptive and costly to the legislative process.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Sick And Tired Of Gasoline Ripoffs

Somehwere in San Rafael, probably in Terra Linda and most likely within a few blocks of Scotty's Market, there is a teenage boy who drives a yellow car with a dark top, possibly a Chevrolet, (could be a creamy yellow) and in the trunk of his car he has a very large red gasoline can with a nice long siphoning hose attached. He moves very quickly but on the night of July 10th he was seen, and although the person who saw him wasn't able to get his license number, he would probably recognize the car and would assuredly recognize the boy.

So, parents, do you know where your boy was on the night in question, at about 11:30 p.m.? And, have you looked in the trunk of your boy's car lately, or the car your boy drives?

I am writing to you because I am getting sick and tired of being ripped-off. We live in a supposedly "nice" neighborhood and yet we are constantly having the mirror broken off one of our cars, we have had tools stolen from our drive-way, in fact one time two jerry cans were taken from the driveway in broad daylight while my husband went to answer the phone - a "wrong number"; we have had jerry cans full of gas stolen from the back of our camper - the steel bands holding them in place had been cut (they were full in preparation for a trip); the same camper was broken into and almost all of the transportable things taken, not only from the camper but from the side boxes on the truck as well.

There truly were a few nice things about "the good old days". There is a whole lot to be said for honesty, respect for other people's property, in fact, respect for other people. Believe it or not, we used to be able to take a bus to a movie in the evening, take a bus home, and without any fear whatsoever, walk from the bus stop to home! We used to be able to leave a bike on the front walk all night and it would still be there in the morning. And we call what happens today Progress?

Supply Of Housing Must Meet Demand

In a recent article in the I-J concerning the checking of growth in the upper Ross Valley, a statement was made that seems to typify the thinking about the current dilemma Marin faces regarding the growth issue and its concomitant ramifications.

The article in question deals with the policy of limiting growth on one hand, while pursuing a policy of providing moderate cost housing on the other. Even with a superficial analysis these two policies are not as completely compatible as the various local governments would like them to be. Rather, the two issues are somewhat at odds with each other, and hence become, in a sense, policy alternatives, not compatible policies.

The Ross Valley example serves as a case in point. Housing, not only in the Ross Valley, but in all of Marin is certainly more expensive than it might otherwise be simply because there is so little of it available. At the same time the demand for housing is growing or at the very least, constant. It is surely not declining. Further, in regard to this specific example, if the goal of having moderate priced housing available in Marin is to be obtained, without being subsidized, the supply must be allowed to achieve at least a semblance of parity with the demand.

It seems in general that in a backlash against overdevelopment local governments have merely flipped the coin over and have gone to the extreme against any sort of growth and concomitant development, which due to growing numbers of people is inevitable. (Even if inmigration to Marin were discounted, the county would still generate internal growth).

A rational response to this situation would be for our local leaders to take a less simplistic view of policy alternatives. They should recognize the myriad of inconsistencies that abound with the growth issue and deal with them intellectually rather than in the gut manner as is currently the case.

Big Hooray For Bill Fusselman

Hooray for Bill Fusselman and his articles! Mr. Fusselman was our former hardworking county supervisor for 22 years when Marvelous Marin was truly marvelous and not administratively top heavy. He has stressed that he has great respect (as do I) for most department heads and their staffs who have served diligently for years.

None of us objects to our tax dollars being spent on deserving people and needed services. But some of our most deserving residents (retired public servants, etc.) are being squeezed inordinately by property taxes while the self-seeking "empire builders" are feathering their own nests at our expense.

Mr. Fusselman "confesses" he opened the door to our present appointed administrator's office. But neither he nor his fellow supervisors had any intention of allowing this office to run amok. Some of the expenditures, past and newly proposed, ordained by this office are mind-boggling by their exorbitant cost and needlessness.

What can be done? The best advice I have received is for all taxpayers to join one of the taxpayers associations. Urge that association to join with all other taxpayers associations and the smaller homeowner groups to voice our dissatisfaction to our elected supervisors. If the supervisors don't know the desires of the majority, they will continue to rubber stamp their appointed administrator's whims, thereby necessitating yet higher taxes for all of us. Very few, if any, of us have received 10, 15 or 17 per cent salary raises this year.

Why West Germany Prospers In Inflation-Racked Europe

LONDON — The contrast between West Germany and Britain today is so striking to the visitor coming from one to the other that he must seek possible explanations.

How can it be that Germany, so recently overrun by defeat in a great war, is today so rich, prosperous, sound, and relatively free of inflation while Britain, a victor in that war, is in serious economic trouble?

There are many partial explanations which we have all heard before. The Germans built new factories, while the British kept on with the old ones. The Germans enjoy work. British avoid it when possible. Defeat spared the postwar Germans the necessity of maintaining a large military force. Britain still keeps up a nuclear deterrent and a substantial Navy.

IT SEEMS TO ME that there is another factor which cannot be proved but which I suspect has a lot to do with the difference between postwar behavior of the two countries.

It struck me in traveling about Germany and talking to Germans that the German people who have emerged from the postwar experience differ markedly from the prewar generation of Germans. Prewar Germany still had a good deal of class distinction. There was an old aristocracy of breeding. There were the Prussian junkers who provided the top officers of the German armed forces. The aristocracy had influence, and used it.

THERE ARE STILL a few people around in government with a "von" in tront of their names, but it seems to mean little or nothing anymore. It neither confers influence nor commands deference on the part of others. The Germans did have a social class structure. Now they strike me as being fully as equalitarian as Americans, perhaps even more so.

IN THIS RESPECT defeat in war was a good thing. The old aristocracy backed Hitler and was responsible for bringing him to power. Their political judgment was discredited by the collapse. The influential hereditary upper class went down with nazism, leaving the German people about as classless and united as it is possible for Europeans to be. There is no overtone of class struggle in their labor-management relations.

Britain still has something left of its old class system and it still plays a role in labor relations. The German workman is less inclined to strike, more sympathetic to management than is the British worker. The German worker does not assume, as the British worker tends to assume, that "they" (meaning the bosses and anyone who isn't a worker) are out to cheat and exploit him. There is still a sense of class friction and struggle in British labor relations.

IN EFFECT, I submit, the Germans had their social revolution incidental to the twin disasters of the Nazi experience and defeat in war. They have emerged as more nearly one people than they probably ever were before in their history. The French have never quite completed their social revolution. The British are, of course, having it gradually. But there are still two nations speaking different languages at least in the southern part of England. And this, I submit, is one reason why there has been so much more labor trouble in Britain than in Germany since the war, and why it has been so much harder for the government here to resist inflation.

Censuring Of The President Is An Outside Possibility

By GEORGE J. MARDER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is now talk in the halls of Congress of censuring rather than impeaching President Nixon.

It could turn out to be nothing more than idle talk, indulged in mostly by reportes and some congressmen, but the possibility has surfaced, with a variey of arguments, pro and con, on censure as a substitute for impeachment.

SOME SAY CENSURE would be a cop-out. Almost everyone is aware of the difficulties of reaching a decision on impeachment. The reluctance of members of Congress to vote for impeachment is understandable. It's hardly like passing a rivers and harbors bill.

It also is understandable that censure is being suggested by some as a means of ending political bickering in the House Judicary Committee, which is nearing completion of its impeachment investigation. It is an inviting thought to find some compromise which Republicans as well as Democrats might support — a compromise perhaps much of the nation could support.

BUT THIS WOULD merely paper over problems, say those against censure. They say the President deserves a direct answer from Congress, yes or no, on impeachment; that the nation, too, deserves a clear verdict whether he is guilty or innocent of high crimes and misdeameanors?

Those favoring censure say this course could be the more appropriate punishment to fit the offenses charged to the President. Their argument goes like this:

IMPEACHMENT IS an awesome power. It can lead to removal of a President lawfully chosen by the people. It should be used only when the crimes are of a magnitude so as to undermine the government, perhaps weaken it fatally, before the people had a chance to speak again. The crime should be gross and the evidence overwhelming before tampering with the people's choice.

This, of course, is for each member of Congress to judge based on the evidence before him. But if the decision is that the crime and the evidence are insufficient for impeachment, should Nixon get off scot free?

WOULD IT MEAN that Congress was approving his conduct? Would it tempt future Presidents who might be similarly inclined?

Those favoring censure say this would be an adequate deterrent. Censure has been used by Congress itself against its own members who strayed from the straight and narrow, but not sufficiently to be expelled. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut was censured by the Senate for an offense similar to one of the charges against Nixon —misuse of campaign funds.

IS CENSURE a practical action? Is censure a practical action?

There is nothing in the Constitution about censure of a President. But Congress can speak out on anything by resolutions. They have no force of law but reflect a state of mind.

Resolutions can be passed by either the House or Senate separately, or jointly by both. They do not require the signature of the President and are not subject to veto.

Full Disclosure Needed On Foreign Commitments

(Reprinted from The San Diego Union)

When President Woodrow Wilson went before the U.S. Congress on Jan. 8, 1918, to outline the Fourteen Points on which he hoped a lasting peace could be achieved after World War I, he headed the list with the principle of "open covenants . . . openly arrived at."

There was good reason for the idealistic Wilson to be wary of secret diplomacy. Secret clauses in treaties among European powers had helped precipitate World War I. While Wilson did not deny the necessity of privacy in diplomatic negotiations, he held that afterwards people should be informed of exactly what their governments were committed to do under international agreements.

The United States of America generally has adhered to a policy of openness in international affairs. The provision in our Constitution requiring ratification of treaties by the Senate assures a thorough airing of their language and all its implications. It is in the area of less formal agreements where secrecy can intrude, and in recent years we have seen a spate of diplomacy which has culminated in U.S. commitments never subjected to the spotlight of treaty ratification.

A writer in the magazine Foreign Policy, apparently with access to unpublished State Department documents, has suggested that U.S. negotiator Henry Kissinger made commitments to North Vietnam which were not revealed in the Vietnam truce agreements signed in Paris in 1973. More recently Mr. Kissinger, as secretary of state, left the world guessing as to what concessions or commitments had been made to achieve troop disengagements on the Syrian and Egyptian fronts in the Middle East.

Sen. Henry Jackson has raised a serious issue of secret diplomacy in his charge that the strategic arms limitation agreement signed in Moscow in 1972 contained a loophole which Mr. Kissinger had to deal with later in a secret amendment to the original agreement.

The American people have accepted the necessity of secrecy in the difficult high-level negotiations in which Mr. Kissinger seems to be a specialist. Indeed, suspense leading to dramatic results seems to be almost a deliberate element of his diplomacy. The results have been so impressive that we may have overlooked the fact that the details of some of these diplomatic achievements have been somewhat abbreviated in reports to Congress and the people.

Successful diplomacy in Southeast Asia, the Middle East and in the area of arms limitation may well rank as signal achievements of President Nixon and the able Mr. Kissinger. It is fair to ask, however, whether the aura of secrecy surrounding some of these negotiations and agreements is in keeping with the need of a free people to know exactly what commitments their government is making in foreign policy. As President Wilson observed half a century ago, a structure of peace based on international agreements is undermined if all the terms are not laid out on the table.

Marin Needs Nerve Center To Meet Emergency Disaster

Three members of Marin County Disaster Council, two county officials and a Powder Puff Derby veteran made a flying visit to San Mateo and Santa Cruz on Friday.

The travelers inspected the emergency operations centers built by the two counties with federal disaster preparedness fund aid.

The biggest hole in the doughnut, so far as Marin County's disaster preparedness stands right now, is the lack of an emergency operations center. The need is to develop an adequate nerve center where Marin County officials, Red Cross and other emergency groups can gather to direct rescue and mop-up in any major earthquake, plane crash or similar disasters.

THERE'S ROOM in unfinished portions of the Marin County Civic Center, and the supervisors voted funds to start the work, during the budget hearings last month.

THE TWO CENTERS the flying Marinites toured are considered showplaces of their types, but differ from each other.

Santa Cruz County's emergency center, completed in 1968, contains everything from dormitories to an infirmary, and is designed to shelter 400 county employees and disaster officials for up to two weeks. A considerable part of the center is in day to day use for other purposes. All the sheriff and fire units are dispatched through the center's communication room, and the cafeteria is open daily.

Inside the center are emergency electrical generators, water and fuel supplies, and separate air conditioning from the rest of the building.

Santa Cruz County has about half Marin's population.

LIKE MARIN, it might be called upon to take care of a considerable influx of people if a major earthquake made it necessary to evacuate the heavier-populated San Francisco Peninsula or the South Bay areas.

San Mateo County's population is about double that of Marin, and it, too, boasts an emergency operations center in the basement of a shiny new county center building.

Probably even more than the Santa Cruz set-up, it is designed for day-to-day use for nonemergency purposes.

Its cafeteria operates daily. Its communications room is the focus of a radio, teletype and computer network linked to all 19 cities in the county by microwave radio — ending reliance on leased telephone lines. Hospitals and ambulances are linked through the center, too.

The center's large and small meeting room are equipped with elaborate closed-circuit television and public address systems. They make the center much in demand for training classes for law enforcement and other agencies.

WHENEVER THE county planning commission or board of supervisors face a large crowd on some issue, they move into the center's largest meeting room, which can seat hundreds by opening folding doors and expanding into the cafeteria.

MAKING THE TOUR were disaster council members Jerome C. Hauke of Mill Valley, Jean Van Den Bos of San Rafael and myself; Frank E. Kirby, county emergency services coordinator, and Thomas Moyer, county communications officer. The transportation was in a twin engine plane belonging to a member of the Marin Sheriff's Aero Squadron. The pilot was the owner's wife, Lynn Barthels, who has flown the hot little Piper Aztec in the cross-country Powder Puff Derby race classic.

PERHAPS the most dramatic moment of the day was the landing when we came back to Gnoss field.

The wind was blowing at right angles to the runway; the strange tricks the hill west of Highway 101 played with the wind made the landing difficult for even our experienced pilot. That one landing made a scary point in favor of the second runway that the county's fliers have been wanting for a long time.

ART BUCHWALD

How Can A Guy Concentrate With Topless Gal Around?

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. — Many people are discovering this summer that it isn't what you read but where you read it that counts. This was dramatically illustrated last weekend at East Hampton, Long Island. I was lying on the beach and the only thing between me and the Atlantic Ocean was a young lady in her 20s trying to get a suntan. In order to do this she lay on her stomach with the top half of her bathing suit undone. This, I assumed, was so that she would get an even tan. As long as she stayed in her position there was nothing to see but her back. But you never know what can happen on a beach.

"I SEE," my wife said reading the paper, "that the failure of the SALT talks means that both superpowers are going to go full steam ahead on offensive missiles."

"What a pity," I said. As I saw it, my best bet would be if some little kid ran by and accidentally showered sand on the girl forcing her to turn her body to find out what was going on.

My wife turned a page. "The bank rates are up to 12½ per cent and now they're predicting they'll go to 13 per cent. Herb Stein, the President's economic adviser, says the only one to blame for inflation is the American people. Do you think we're really responsible?"

"IF HE SAYS so," I replied. There was another hope. If some bather came out of the ocean wringing wet and dropped water on her back, the shock of it might make the girl sit up.

"The White House transcripts don't jell with the ones released by the House Judiciary Committee," my wife read. "Mr. Nixon certainly looks like he knew a lot more about Watergate than he admitted. Why is it taking them so long to impeach him?"

"That's a good question," I answered. My only other hope would be a cloudburst. The icy raindrops would certainly make her panic.

"IT SAYS HERE," my wife continued, "that Mr. Nixon's strategy, if the Supreme Court makes him turn over the tapes, will be to stonewall Jaworski, by saying it will take a lot of time to find the tapes and edit them. In that way the House Judiciary Committee won't have time to hear all the evidence before they're forced to vote. All he's doing is stalling. Doesn't it make you furious?"

"Live and let live I always say."

"You don't seem very excited about the news," my wife said.

"I AM, I AM. Why is Mr. Nixon stonewalling Herb Stein?"

"He isn't stonewalling Stein; he's stonewalling Jaworski."

"Hmmmn," I said. The dear girl seemed to be asleep. My only hope now was that she'd have a bad dream and wake up startled.

My wife continued reading the paper out loud. "The National Football League strike is still on. You might not be able to see the Redskins this fall."

"Are you all right?" she asked.

"I'm fine. My neck hurts a little from the sun."

"You know," my wife said, "she's not going to move."

"Who?" I pretended to be surprised.

"THAT TOPLESS floozie over there." She folded up her newspaper neatly. "Anyway even if she moved, it wouldn't have done you any good."

"Why not?"

"Beacause," she said sweetly, "I would have kicked sand in your eyes."

Emigre Tells Of Problems Of Jews In Soviet Union

By MARY LEYDECKER

It was a June day in 1970 at the airport in Leningrad that the years of terror and sorrow began for Julia Dymshits, a Russian Jew now living in Israel.

In San Rafael today, Miss Dymshits, now 19, told her story in an interview with the Independent-Journal. A long-haired dark-eyed young woman, her face readily breaks into a smile, but sadness never leaves her eyes.

"We entered the field," she recalled, that day in Leningrad to steal a plane and leave the country. "Suddenly we saw we were surrounded by men — many people wearing the suits of pilots — and holding . . ."

Her English faltered and she made the universal gestures and sounds which mean machine guns in any language.

As she, her father, mother and sister and some 10 other people were arrested by Russian secret police, they knew their plans to escape to Israel had ended in disaster.

Julia, then 15, was taken to a "special camp for children," where, she said, "I cried for two days. But I have not cried since."

Her sister, Liza, 18, and her mother, were taken to prison, but they, like Julia, were released after a month.

Mark Dymshits, the father, met a much more serious fate. After a trial which attracted worldwide attention but which was held in secret in Moscow, he and another man, Eduard Kuznetsov, were sentenced to death.

Then in December 1970, the Russian Supreme Court, presumably acting on orders from the Kremlin commuted his sentence to 15 years. Dymshits was ordered to serve his time on "strict regime," the Soviet equivalent of hard labor and the longest sentence permitted under Soviet law.

Dymshits, a onetime pilot in the Russian Army, had planned to fly the escape plane, which his daughter today described as a "very small plane . . . one used in agriculture."

The Jews, having been denied permission to emigrate, apparently intended to fly to Sweden and then make their way to Israel.

They did not plan to take hostages, but intended to leave the plane's regular pilots at the airport, Miss Dymshits said today.

Nonetheless, the case was treated as a highjacking by the Russian courts and the heavy sentences handed out.

Mark Dymshits is now in the fourth year of his sentence and, although his daughter saw him a couple of times before being allowed to emigrate to Israel about 10 months ago, she does not really know how his health is.

She and her mother and sister have made the long trip from Leningrad to Perm in the interior of Russia to see Dymshits on the dates visiting was allowed. But when they got there, three men "from the administration" of the camp supervised their conversations and interrupted if any questions of health or prison conditions were mentioned.

Miss Dymshits does not even know what kind of work her father is required to do in prison because he is not allowed to write about it or discuss it during visits.

Although she said she did not know the English word for the disease from which her father has suffered since imprisonment, she made it clear with gestures that he has painful arthritis and "cannot move his fingers in the morning."

She suspects, too, that during the winter months Dymshits and the other prisoners suffer from the cold, although he "only can say the weather is cold."

A woman Miss Dymshits knows, who was released from Russian prison, said she was so cold she could not sleep and covered herself with newspapers during the winter.

Miss Dymshits also said she knows that her father receives only 1,200 calories a day, composed of "products not suitable" for people. "They are always hungry," she said of the prisoners, a technique, she said, used to make prisoners more amenable to abandoning their ideals.

When still in Russia, Miss Dymshits and others went to Moscow to plead for amnesty for their relatives. Their reward, she said, was arrest followed by two weeks in prison.

At the prison camp in Perm, where her father is, Miss Dymshits said, are not only other Jews but also men still serving sentences for murdering Jews during World War II.

Miss Dymshits had been one of the young Jews in Leningrad who gathered outside the city's only synagogue on Saturdays to "talk about Jewish problems." Some went to services, she said, but most participated only in a "kind of club" which met outside.

Each year, many Russian Jews have applied for permission to emigrate to Israel, but most are turned down. Last year, though, Miss Dymshits and her sister received official permission and flew to Vienna and then Jerusalem, where she has been studying English and Hebrew. ("Next year I will study physics," she said.)

Their mother stayed behind in Russia, both because of poor health but also so that she can visit their father, Miss Dymshits said.

The girl is currently on a one-week trip to the United States sponsored by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, working toward bringing American pressure to bear on the Russians in regard to prison conditions.

"Especially Americans can help," she said.

She suggested Americans contact senators and congressmen and that our government pressure the Russian officials, through trade agreements, to improve prison conditions, if not grant amnesty to Jewish prisoners.

"Russia can release our relatives if there is a question of trade," she said.

EMIGRE — Julia Dymshits, 19-year-old Russian Jew who now lives in Israel, tells of her father, who is serving a 15-year hard-labor sentence in Russia for his part in a plot to escape the country.

Six Marin Students Make Honor Roll

Six Marin County students were among the undergraduates named to the 1974 President's Honors List at California Polytechnic State University. They were honored for having been on the university dean's list three times in the 1973-74 school year.

The local students are Jorgine S. Allan of San Rafael, Kenneth J. Schmitz of Forest Knolls, Margaret J. Johnson of Larkspur, Patricia D. Humphrey of Mill Valley, Susan E. Bunch and Judith M. Larson, both of Novato.

Hyperactivity Linked To Additives In Food

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A study of 25 schoolchildren with records of hyperactivity showed improvement when they were placed on diets with no artificial flavoring or coloring in their food, the State Department of Education disclosed yesterday.

The survey of children suffering from hyperkinesis in Santa Cruz schools showed that 16 displayed marked lessening in tension in a test over a two-month period.

The other nine children showed no improvement, the department said, but only two followed the diet long enough to show effects.

The findings were made public by State Supt. of Public Instruction Wilson Riles and Dr. Ben F. Feingold of the Kaiser Foundation hospitals.

"These children are head bangers, head rockers, crib shakers," said Feingold. "I had one child who was shaking the crib so violently that it broke the crib and and another so hyperactive and restless two people had to hold the child to change a diaper."

Riles said the findings would be turned over to the department's food services unit which administers the school lunch program and to the child nutrition consultants for possible future action.

Feingold said that over the years he and other clinicians have "observed adverse reactions to food colors and flavors affecting practically every system of the body."

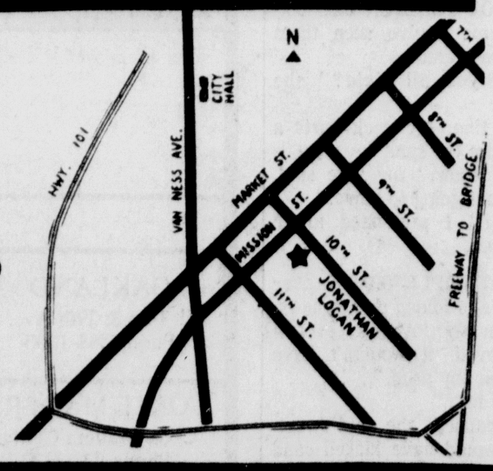

In nearly 60 per cent of the children studied, Feingold said, removal of the artificial ingredients produced "an almost immediate reversal of their hyperactive pattern, even in cases where they've had a history dating back to early infancy and been on medication for many years."

ANNUAL EVENT OPENS

A Preview Of Fall Fashions

By JOAN LISETOR

Yesterday's summer sunshine offered an ideal setting for the nearly 500 guests at the Northgate Group's al fresco luncheon and fashion show at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

Cosponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco the luncheon was the first of a weekly series of six. The event, a 27-year tradition at the center, also offered a preview of fall fashions. Clothes yesterday were supplied by Modern Eve of San Rafael.

Fashions for fall included pants outfits, a contrast to the women in the audience, few of whom were wearing pantsuits.

Fashions in the show ran the gamut from casual to dressy and included the Harlow and Gatsby looks, but most had the good classic lines for fall. Hats topped many outfits, and will be popular in the fall, according to the fashion show commentator Gloria Adair, who also predicted a comeback of spectator shoes.

The show opened with Mrs. MacDonald Denman in a coral and black ensemble. She wore the coral skirt and jacket over a black blouse and carried a long skirt. The suit also comes with pants. Mrs. Charles Bowman followed in party pajamas in a hand painted fabric. Next Mrs. Robert O. Valentine in a Gatsby look sweatshirt style polyester shirt over pants. She carried a large yellow patent leather purse.

Other interesting fashions were the long navy matte jersey dress with a short chiffon jacket worn by Mrs. Bernard Stone. Off came her jacket to reveal an evening gown with spaghetti straps.

ALL IN WHITE and with feathers flying Mrs. Richard Blackman came down the runway at yesterday's Northgate luncheon and fashion show. Her decollete dress and bare back were covered with the shawl shaped feather boa. (Photos by Bob Hax)

USING PARASOLS to shade themselves from the sun, a group of women digs into the turkey salad served at yesterday's Northgate Group al fresco luncheon and fashion show. The event, co-sponsored by the Junior League of San Francisco, was held at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

Wilda Ross Book Atop Guild List

The newest book of Wilda Ross of Mill Valley, "Can You Find the Animal?" has been selected by the Junior Literary Guild as its July choice for children in the second and third grades.

The book deals wtih the natural camouflage of animals.

Mrs. Ross was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley in botany. She has worked for the Bureau of Insect Identification of the Department of Agriculture, has done independent study in entomology, and has traveled throughout the world on scientific trips sponsored by the California Academy of Sciences.

She has also taught nature study at the Josephine Randall Museum in San Francisco and has assisted with enrichment programs at Park and Old Mill schools in Mill Valley.

The new book is Mrs. Ross' third children's book on natural subjects. It was published by Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, Inc., New York. Her fourth book, "Cracks and Crannies and The Animals That Live There," is ready to go to press.

Food Shoppers Use Small Stores, Too

Many shoppers use small grocery stores to supplement regular super market buying, according to a survey released by convenience store operators.

The survey stated that dairy items account for 12½ per cent of total sales, followed by beer at 11.48 per cent, soft drinks at 9.06 per cent, dry groceries at 7.06 per cent, and baked goods at 6.95 per cent.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

When All's Said And Done, Big Brother's A Really Swell Guy

DEAR RAP:

I'd like to share with you what my big brother is to me: He's the guy who wakes you up in the morning by bouncing your head up and down on the pillow until you get mad and chase him out of the room. (Then he's sure you're up on time.)

A big brother is the guy who won't ever cuss in front of you because he doesn't want to be a bad influence. A big brother is also the one who...

...tells you your dress is too short (for such pretty legs) and jokingly asks you to leave the room when a censored part comes on TV.

...asks your opinion on the new shoes he bought.

...says if you get him mad, he'll beat up the dog, but he wouldn't really.

...makes you a homemade valentine because he didn't want to buy all the relatives one.

...sticks up for you when you're in trouble.

...is the guy that will call you "punk" when you're sad, to make you laugh.

...says, "No crying!" before his wedding because you will.

P.S. He married a great girl, but I still know that no matter what, he'll still be my big brother.

RAP:

We're going through a tremendously expensive "Operation Neuter" in our big company. All the forms that formerly referred to "chairman," "doorman," "repairman," etc., etc. are being de-sexed to read "chairperson," "guard," "Maintenance worker," etc.

It's costing thousands in labor and printing, not to speak of the forms that must be tossed. All because women's libbers got hot under the bra and made people word-conscious.

We must even say "he or she" instead of merely "he" in referring to holders of these positions. Is it really necessary to be so picky? — PUBLIC RELATIONS PERSON

DEAR PERSON:

"Sex change operations" are being conducted in many businesses these days. Even the vast state of California is in the midst of revising its office forms, job descriptions, application blanks, etc. to eliminate "man" where "woman" can also apply. And the cost is spectacular.

Is all this necessary?

You'll be surprised to hear that my daughter, Sue, Generation Rap's resident feminist, thinks "Not necessarily so," and I, the middle-of-the-road elder statesperson think, "Yes!" — so long as the title implies "for men only," women may be edged off the job.

But my "Yes" is with reservations. I'd prefer wherever possible that forms change through attrition rather than dumping and revision. A wait of a year or so for present supplies to dwindle won't stop the Equal Rights Movement — and think of the money saved! — HELEN

NOTE FROM SUE: Now wait just a darn minute, Mom! I'm for gradual revision, too, but I think it's ridiculous, spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on an "instant sex change."

Anthropologist Attacks Movement

Anthropologist Margaret Mead has criticized some aspects of the women's movement for equality and predicted that unless women stop "blaming the wrong people" the movement will "turn into something horrible and sour."

In an interview in the current issue of Redbook Magazine, Dr. Mead acknowledged that the wide spectrum of the women's movement makes it difficult to generalize about it, but she expressed concern over the Movement's aspects of bitterness toward men, lesbianism, consciousness raising and isolation of women.

Ring Rules Drawn For Marriage

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — "Almost everyone starts a marriage based on fantasy but they have to cope with differences they didn't expect," said a University of Connecticut clinical psychologist who specializes in "fight training."

"The goal of fight training is to set up ground rules and define fighting styles so that couples can harness their aggressiveness and use it for positive purposes," said Donald Mosher, a Gestalt therapist.

Mosher said his workshops are usually limited to six couples who are taught techniques in "fighting fair."

"Like the heavyweights, sometimes in couples one partner has the upper hand with more verbal skill and so forth. Through fight training, the dove has a better chance of coping with a hawk," Mosher said.

ALTHOUGH MOSHER said fighting is a healthy and valuable aspect of marriage, "most couples tend to have the same fight a thousand times and differences go unresolved."

To break up the repetitive cycle, Mosher suggests setting up ground rules for "constructive fighting," instead of "ritual fighting":

"Couples must decide what are the important issues in their marriage. Will a fight necessarily resolve the differences?"

"Couples should agree not to bring issues out of the past if there is no benefit in thrashing them out. They should agree on sensitive areas that are too delicate to withstand a fight."

"The use of language is important. Profanities are useless if they fail to articulate a point," Mosher said.

Fighting is inevitable in any marriage "because one partner always violates some set of expectations of the other," Mosher added.

"We eventually have to resolve our differences so why waste steam that goes nowhere?" he said.

CONSUMER ACCIDENTS

Need For Education, Strict Safety Codes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The vice chairman of the Consumer Products Safety Commission accidentally set fire to her electric dishwasher when a wooden spoon fell into the back after the wash cycle was completed.

Another woman used a celery stalk to push food into her blender while it was running. The blades pulled both the celery and her hand into the cutting assembly.

A 9-month-old baby suffered second degree burns when she turned a coffeepot over on herself.

Each year an estimated 20 million Americans are injured in accidents involving products used in and around the home. Some 110,000 are injured permanently and 30,000 are killed.

Barbara H. Franklin, commission vice chairman, thinks prevention of such accidents will take a combination of consumer education and more stringent safety standards for consumer goods ranging from bicycles and power mowers to small household appliances.

IN AN INTERVIEW, Mrs. Franklin said consumers are becoming more safety conscious. Her agency hopes to increase their awareness. She was in New York to address a meeting of the portable appliance division of the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers (AHAM).

She said the commission is compiling a hazard index with data from 119 hospital emergency rooms around the country. Many reports involve small children who burn themselves by tipping over electric coffeepots. Many others are caused by women who accidentally hit the "on" button of a mixer or blend while inserting or removing the beating or cutting assembly.

"Maybe manufacturers need a label saying 'unplug before dismantling,' or maybe some appliances need safety locks," she said.

Mrs. Franklin's views on industry responsibility raised hackles at a press seminar here for appliance editors and writers. Manufacturers opposed what they called government intervention. They said industry was doing all it could to build safety into products. Some said more safety features could be added if consumers were willing to pay extra.

Meantime, a commission hotline established last November on a trial basis keeps ringing at the rate of about 2,000 calls a week. The toll free number — 800 638-2666 — is manned 12 hours daily, starting at 8:30 a.m.

Some people ask about safety features to look for on products they plan to buy. Others describe hazards they have encountered.

MRS. FRANKLIN said the commission also receives letters and petitions asking for safety rules. It is going to channel all this energy into a consumers' panel to work with industry, government and researchers.

Mrs. Franklin is recruiting panelists with a letter to women's organizations. It says, in part:

"I think the safety of a product can best be judged by the way it performs in everyday life. In other words, we need more understanding of the human side of products — how people use and misuse them.

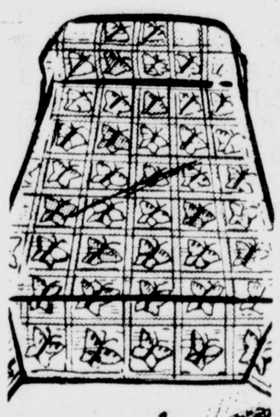

"We need women to ask the questions that technical people in the laboratories might forget.

"We need women who may also have technical expertise."

Anyone interested in joining the roster of consumer volunteers should send name, address, phone number and brief description of interests, experience and occupation to:

MONEY CAKES

Peggy MacDonald of San Rafael frosts what looks like a delicious cake, but don't try to taste it. She and Kathy Glass of Fairfax (left), members of the San Rafael Jaycettes, decorated styrofoam cakes that will be distributed to business in San Rafael. Business will place them on cash registers, wehre customers can place loose change that will be donated to the Cerebral Palsy Foundation. Jaycette members will pick up the cakes when they are filled and replace them with fresh ones.

Fund Raiser For Animal Group Set

A fund-raising spaghetti dinner to benefit the Animal Medical Care Foundation of Marin will be held Sunday at 5 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Rogers in San Rafael.

Belly dancer Stassa of San Anselmo, guitarist Nowell Newton of San Rafael and blues singer Marlaine Barbas of Sausalito will entertain.

Proceeds will underwrite the foundation's fair, scheduled for Sept. 21 and 22 at the San Geronimo Valley Horsemen's Assn. grounds.

Reservations chairman is Mrs. Paul Putnam of Novato.

The Animal Medical Care Foundation, which recently opened an office at 110 Carlos Drive, San Rafael, provides low-cost animal sterilization, monies from which finance live-saving operations for pets of county residents in financial need.

Couple Plans Mid-August Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Smith of Larkspur announce the engagement of their daughter Christine Smith of Larkspur to Edward John Anello of San Francisco.

Christine is the sister of Robert D. Smith of St. Louis, Mo., and Diane and Rebecca Smith of Larkspur. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Luigi Degiogio of Ogden, Utah, and Clarence D. Smith of San Francisco. The future bride is a graduate of Marin Catholic High School, the University of California at Berkeley and the University of San Francisco Law School. She attends New York University, where she is working toward a master's degree in taxation law.

Edward's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius J. Anello of San Francisco. He is the brother of Mrs. Allan Brann of Brisbane and Rosemarie Anello of San Francisco. His grandparents are Mrs. Rosa Conte of San Francisco and Mr. and Mrs. John Anello of Pittsburgh. The future bridegroom was graduated from Sacred Heart High School and the University of San Francisco. He is employed by the Novato Unified School District.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 17.

Individual Look

Skirt lengths should suit the individual. The liberated woman will buy the big skirt and if it doesn't look right on her, shorten it, says designer Bob Goldworm.

Anita Parker, Louis Butti Repeat Vows

Anita Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Rose of Eureka, and Louis Butti of Novato were married at the Marin Civic Center in San Rafael on July 10.

The bride chose Rozan Perry of Novato as her maid of honor, and Larry Butti of Novato, the bridegroom's brother, was best man.

The couple went to Lake Tahoe on their wedding trip. They will live in Novato.

Anita was graduated from Novato High School and Santa Rosa Beauty College. She is employed at House of Charles Beauty Salon in Santa Rosa. She is the sister of Rita Mason, Benita Tiby and Dennis and Dana Rose and the granddaughter of Mrs. Elva Rowe of Grand Island, Neb.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Butti of Novato and the grandson of Mrs. Ancilla Pedrazzi of Petaluma. He is also the brother of Alvina Butti of Novato. He was graduated from Novato High School and is employed at North Marin Water District in Novato.

JEWISH SUMMER CAMP

An Introduction To Art

By MARK LITTMAN

Laura Dushkes, 14, of San Francisco, sat in a bungalow at the Santa Venetia Middle School painstakingly fashioning a wax sculpture of a horse.

"I can't draw," she admitted as her thin fingers skillfully kneaded the pliant material. "But I love working with my hands."

Across the work table, Elizabeth Dasher, 9, of Mill Valley, leaned back in her chair and with a complacent glow inspected her project — a seated wax sculpture of her family.

Until three weeks ago, neither girl had ever even heard of wax sculpture.

But it's only one of several art and musical mediums that they and 40 other young people, aged 8 to 14, are learning this summer while attending the Marin Jewish Community Center's art camp.

The camp is being held at the Santa Venetia Middle School in two three-week sessions. The first camp ends Friday and the second will begin Aug. 5.

Classes are held Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Mornings are devoted to art instruction while students engage in dance and ensemble activities in the afternoons.

While Laura and Elizabeth quietly busied themselves, Jay Linder, 11, of Terra Linda, was engrossed in weaving a colorful pendant in a nearby bungalow.

Under the attentive ey of Sara Perkoff, a Mill Valley artist, other youths were intently working on prints, collages, paintings and tapestries sprawled about the work table or draped decoratively on the wall.

Earlier, the class had worked jointly on a "mandala," an Eastern Oriental art work in which each individual paints a portion of an empty circle working from the center to the outer edges.

Afternoons are ushered in with the tumultous crescendo of rhythmic steel drums as the focus of instruction shifts to music.

Dwarfed by three 55 gallon oil drums, Michael Ranallo, 8, of Sausalito, the bass player in the makeshift orchestra, begins the session by steadily pounding a steady beat with two small wooden mallets.

"One ... two ... three ... one ... two ... three," he paces the seven other youngsters, positioned behind steel drums of various sizes, each having the notes strategically marked.

Don Jacobs, the instructor, accompanies them on an accordion and struggles to maintain musical discipline with the anxious group.

He said that the youths — most of whom haven't had much exposure to musical instruments — can learn scales within two minutes because of the simplicity of the drums, and songs by ear.

Also in the afternoon, Yvonne Lyerla, director of the program, teaches folk dancing and singing.

At the end of the second session in late August, the youths will stage a public concert at the school and will also display their handicrafts.

FROM THE FILM — Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland appear in a scene from "Babes on Broadway," one of the many segments of "That's Entertainment," a film which is proving to be the "sleeper" of the season.

MOTION PICTURE GUIDE

The Marin Motion Picture and TV Council provides these ratings of movies now being shown in Marin County. The Council's findings are from the California and National Parent-Teacher Association Magazine and Parents' Magazine unless otherwise noted. More complete reviews may be obtained by calling the San Rafael City Library.

FAMILY

"The Golden Voyage of Sinbad" — Here of Arabian Nights returns a kingdom to its rightful leader. Fast-paced adventure and magical special effects. Very young children may be frightened by weird animals.

"Herbie Rides Again" — Helen Hayes, an eccentric granny in distress is aided by an old Volkswagen in this Disney sequel to the "Love Bug." Fun for all.

"The Wetback Hound" — Delightful Disney short film tells the story of a dog and its adventures in escaping from Mexico.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"American Graffitti" — Nostalgic view of young people in early 60's follows four pals one evening in small California town. Strong language, sex.

"Butch Cassidy and The Sundance Kid" — Butch is easy-going, the thinker and Sundance the expert gunman in this story of a pair of bank robbers whose wit, daring and humanity made headlines at the turn of the century. They escape from the law to South America, taking along Sundance's sweetheart, and resume their taking ways. Delightful scenery and good camera work, but sympathy is with the robbers and shows violence of their way of life and death.

"The Heartbreak Kid" — Brittle comedy, well-acted story of a ruthless man who always gets what he wants. He marries one girl but falls in love with another on their honeymoon.

"Mame" — Eye-dazzling musical tells the story of an orphan boy who goes to live with his zany, socialite Auntie Mame. Film is lavishly mounted, some cursing and jokes about sex.

"Mr. Majestyk" — Standard crime drama for fans of Charles Bronson. Mr. Majestyk, (Bronson) is law-abiding through he's served time for a barroom brawl. He is finally forced to take the law into his own hands. Plenty of action, the inevitable chase and brutal violence.

"Rommeo and Juliet" — Superb production of Shakespeare's classic story of young lovers in rebellion against their parents who would keep them apart.

BORDERLING
(Most sources say adults only.)

"For Pete's Sake" — Barbara Streisand in a zany, slapstick comedy. Housewife borrows money from underworld to help husband. She tries prostitution, cattle rustling, etc. to repay debt. Some of the humor questionable, black-ethnic and black-macabre comedy. (Box-Office)

"Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean" — Bandit appoints himself town judge, using his own eccentric brand of justice. Town prospers on money taken from hanged victims. Violence, cursing.

"Our Time" — Adventures of two New England boarding school girls in the mid-1950s who are boy-crazy. Film starts well, good casting, dialogue witty and true, but gets melodramatic when one girl gets pregnant and decides to have an abortion. Sex, cursing.

"Parallax View" — Six out of 10 witnesses to an assassination die under mysterious circumstances. A newspaper reporter reopens the case. Exciting entertainment. Cursing.

"Save the Tiger" — Grim but thought-provoking picture of success and its pressures. A business man commits a felony in order to stay in business. Cursing.

"Serpico" — A true story of a one-man war against corruption in New York City. Sex, cursing and violence alleviated by warmth and humor.

"S.P.Y.S." — Primitive slapstick spoofing the CIA. Two agents stationed in Paris are pursued by their fellow agents as well as the enemy. Violence in a humorous context. (Product Digest).

"Steelyard Blues" — Satirical comedy about a $100-a-trick hooker and a group of zany characters attempting to rebuild a plane with stolen parts. Violence, cursing & sex.

"The Sting" — A pair of cool 1930s con-men set out to ruin a powerful Chicago racketeer. Entertaining for the mature, but cursing and violence.

ADULTS ONLY

"Dont' Look Now" — Based on short story of Daphne Du Maurier film tells of an English couple in Venice who are warned of an impending danger to the husband by a blind psychic. The message is ignored and the worst happens. Very explicit and erotic love scene puts it in this category.

"99 44/100% Dead" — A big city in the midst of gang war between two crime czars whose victims usually end up in cement in the river. A gang war film, pop-art style. The name of the game is staying alive. Sadism, sex, violence. (Box Office)

"The Laughing Policeman" — Film maker's obsession with documenting ad nauseum San Francisco's notoriety as the sin capital of America, with unrelenting emphasis on gutter language and supergraphic violence. Apt to revolt those especially drawn to the film on basis of Matthau's past films.

Photo Exhibit

Photographs by W. Caldwell Bowers of Mill Valley and Norman J. McMahon of Carmel are now on display at Home Federal Savings and Loan Association's Sausalito office, 2656 Bridgeway.

'THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT'

Film Combines Best Of Everything

By ARTHUR UNGER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

The most rousing "sleeper" in movie history is threatening to break all-time summer attendance records. It is bringing back old-fashioned audiences who have forsaken films in recent years and introducing new moviegoers to an almost forgotten art form — the film musical.

The movie is "That's Entertainment," a mixed bag from MGM's golden era featuring sections of some of the greatest and funniest film musicals made from 1929 to 1958. Word of mouth — and paid promotional advertising — has been tremendous, with more TV coverage than any film in recent movie history (excepting, perhaps, "The Exorcist").

Is all this hukstering justified? For me, the answer is a rousing "Yes!" I have seldom had such an uninhibited good time at a movie. And I have seldom seen an audience enjoy itself more, with constant cheering and applause. Admittedly, sometimes the laughter was directed at the film clips rather than with them, but in all cases, it was totally pleasurable. I half expected the audience to link arms and dance out of the theater en masse singing "That's Entertainment."

Prepare yourself for a shower of stars who mime away with dubbed voices, swing their skirts in rhythm when the legs just won't do it, let the eyes do the emoting when the facial muscles can't make it, or vice versa.

Everybody played the game — even Clark Gable and Jimmy Stewart were inveigled into song-and-dance numbers, badly but earnestly. And Fred Astaire, with Ginger, with Cyd, even with Joan Crawford.

I promise you will never again forget Crawford in "Dancing Daughters," swinging those shoulders and arms like marionette limbs gone awry, puffing her way through a Charleston. And Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald singing into each other's faces without batting an eyelash.

"That's Entertainment" has so far been tested in New York and Los Angeles — it broke the house record at New York's Ziegfeld Theater in its first week and it is building to a house record in its Los Angeles engagement.

United Artists, the distributing organization, plans to release the film slowly during the summer with one-theater, 70-mm stereophonic showings in some 46 other cities.

The film brazenly dips into 200 films and culls around 80 sequences, which include just about every MGM star you recall from the early days of your moviegoing — ranging from Cliff Edwards to Jimmy Durante, Jean Harlow, Joan Crawford, Judy Garland, Eleanor Powell, Clark Gable, Frank Sinatra, Lena Horne, June Allyson, Debbie Reynolds, Esther Williams, Kathryn Grayson, Gene Kelly. And lots more.

One of the funniest bits, which owes its effectiveness to a clever editing job —is the hilarious sequence of quick cuts of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland from a series of films in which the climactic line is always: "Say, kids, let's raise the money by putting on a show in the barn."

However, for pure hilarity, I prefer the series of Esther Williams "spectaquacles" in which that all-American mermaid glides through an underwater labyrinth of air-bubbling showgirls, raises her right arm to activate hundreds of fountains, waves her left arm to activate a flaming torch within each fountain, then shoots 20 feet into the air on a column of water only to slide down again on a chute into a chorus of swimming, singing, splashing mermen ... well, it goes on and on.

Written, produced, and directed by Jack Haley Jr. (the son of "The Wizard of Oz" Jack Haley, by the way), the film also features as narrators Fred Astaire, Bing Crosby, Gene Kelly, Peter Lawford, Liza Minelli, Donald O'Connor, Debbie Reynolds, Mickey Rooney, Frank Sinatra, James Stewart, and Elizabeth Taylor, all reminiscing about the good old days — and, incidentally, giving you a chance to compare their current appearance with their old selves. As Mickey Rooney says when he comes on screen after a flash of himself as a boy entertainer: "Well, we've all changed, haven't we?"

Yes, we've all changed — especially movies. They just don't make 'em like that anymore — filled with all-singing, all-dancing, all-overacting (or underacting) beautiful people of mostly mediocre musical talent but a determination to entertain.

Studio head Louis B. Mayer used ironclad studio contracts with his stars to force many of them to sing and dance — in some of the most gotta-have-a-good-time films of the era. Whether or not they were successful movies in their own time, they are now proving to be exactly right for 1974.

A warning: Don't be led by your enjoyment of "That's Entertainment" to demand that the original movies be revived. Most of us have forgotten just how awful many of these films were when shown in their entirety — often an hour and a half of hackneyed story line waiting for a production number.

What director Haley has done is extract the best. It's not a true picture of what the old musicals were — it's what we like to think they were.

Helen Hayes Views More Reflective Life

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Could the unparalleled 65-year acting career of Helen Hayes be reaching the final performance?

She thinks so, but she is reluctant to make a formal announcement.

Once before she declared she had given up the stage forever. A few months later she was acting on Broadway in a revival of "The Front Page," written by her late husband, Charles MacArthur, and Ben Hecht.

Still possessed with limitless energy, the 73-year-old actress was here overnight from Honolulu, where she had helped son James MacArthur with a benefit. In the morning she would be leaving for London to appear with Peter Ustinov in "One of Our Dinosaurs is Missing." It would mark her second Disney production and — she thinks — her last film.

HELEN HAYES
Will she retire?

"I really must stop all this," she remarked. "It's such an interruption of my life ... I love my home in Nyack, N.Y., I love my house in Mexico. I would like more time to enjoy them and to do the things I like to do.

"Would I miss acting. I wish I wouldn't. I agree that I must like it or I wouldn't have done it all these years.

"Somewhere inside me is a fear that I might get very lost without it. But I don't really think that will happen."

Miss Hayes finally had to give up the theater because of a bronchial condition that was aggravated by backstage dust.

"Whenever I did a play, I always ended up in the hospital for a week," she recalled. "I finally told myself I was such a bad risk I might as well have been a drunk."

"The Snoop Sisters," the television miniseries in which she starred with Mildred Natwick last season, hastened Miss Hayes' urge to retire.

"I was miserable doing it," she said. "It was like a jail sentence ... The hours that we had to work were terrible, not only for Mildred and myself, but everyone.

"I felt petulant, angry and sorry for myself. Oh, it's easy to sit on the sidelines and say, 'Why should television stars complain when they're getting paid $125,000 a show.'

"But something inside you feels put upon when you are required to work under such miserable conditions."

Helen Hayes' career has been laden with honors, including two Academy Awards "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," 1931; "Airport," 1970. Now she seeks a more reflective life.

"I have a great interest and inquisitiveness about the world around me," she enthused. "If I ever start to get bored, I simply take a walk. Then the fun begins."

Ali's Home Sold For $175,000

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (UPI) — Boxer Muhammad Ali's suburban home has been sold to a MacDonald's hamburger franchise owner for $175,000.

Officials said yesterday that settlement for the Ali home, a 14-room Spanish-style ranch surrounding an atrium court, was made May 4 and filed in Camden County municipal records on May 10.

The house, which Ali bought for $102,000 in March 1971, was sold to Anthony Micale, who owns two MacDonald's hamburger franchises in Philadelphia and one in Levittown, Pa. The home includes a 20-foot reflecting pool, a 23-foot bar, a movie projection room and a three-car garage.

Wornum Atop The Spending List

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum spent $22,500 in family funds to win the Democratic nomination last month in the Ninth Assembly District.

Final campaign finance reports for the June 4 primary election also show that Wornum's closest rival in the contest, Jack R. Felson, spent $19,550 of his own money.

Other candidates put up to $5,000 apiece in their races, and also face paying off deficits.

Only eight of the 188 local candidates failed to file finance reports by Friday's deadline. They have until Aug. 1 to file statements and pay fines up to $150. After that date, the county will refer their cases to both the district attorney and state attorney general for possible prosecution.

Wornum spent $37,606 to defeat four other candidates, and took in $11,399 in contributions from outside the family. He contributed $1,000 and "loaned" $14,000, while his mother, Mrs. Grey Wornum of San Francisco, gave $2,500 and "loaned" $5,000.

With a deficit of $3,707, it appeared unlikely that the two loans would be repaid.

Wornum's report, covering the closing weeks of the primary campaign, showed contributions of $1,000 each from Rose and Paul Warda of Modesto and Byron Leydecker of Tiburon. The Independent-Journal previously reported contributions made earlier in the campaign.

Felson's receipts totaled $28,696, including the $19,550 of his own money ($15,000 of it a bank loan), and he spent $30,172.

George J. Silvestri Jr., another defeated candidate in the Democratic Assembly race, took in $24,295 and spent $24,262. His final report showed $500 contributions from the Morgan Equipment Co. and Insurance Men's Political Action Committee of San Francisco. It also showed a $300 gift from Albert D. Elledge, who was listed only as "self-employed."

The report requires that the place of business of contributors be listed if they are self-employed. Elledge is head of Harbor Tours and an outspoken opponent of the Golden Gate Bridge District's entry into the ferryboat business. Silvestri also was sharply critical of the bridge district during his campaign.

Harry J. Moore, also a Democratic candidate, spent $3,002 against $2,768 in receipts, including $1,493 of his own money.

The winner of the Republican nomination, A. Alan Hill, spent $17,858 and took in $18,663. These sums include $4,741 collected and $4,145 spent on his behalf by a Sacramento-based committee which failed to file a report showing finances after May 25.

Unsuccessful GOP candidate Gerald J. Hood spent $5,081 and took in $3,774. Albert J. Schloegel spent less than $500, as did the Peace and Freedom Party candidate, Nancy V. Gunn.

The third GOP candidate, Susan A. Delaplane, failed to file a final report. Her May report showed $2,810 in expenses and $2,482 in contributions, including $2,411 from her mother.

In the Second Senatorial District, Behr's successful campaign for his party's nomination for reelection cost $39,276. Receipts totaled $43,065, including $4,305 from the California Medical Political Action Committee, an arm of the California Medical Association.

Behr's report for the final spending period showed only $1,805 from the committee, leaving blank the column requiring candidates to state the cumulative amount given by the organization. A separate report by the medical committee, however, showed the full amount.

The report on Behr's campaign also showed $1,350 from the Employees Political Information Committee, $500 each from the Lawyers and Clients for Good Government and the Bankers for Responsible Government Committee, and $400 from "UH-PAC," a group of private hospitals. Behr contributed $1,000 of his own money.

Behr's defeated challenger, Sonoma County Supervisor Robert Theiller, spent $12,918 and took in $13,140, including $2,000 unspent from his previous races for supervisor, $1,250 from Bodega Bay lumberman William Chenoweth and $1,000 from Don Dowd, Sebastopol contractor.

The Democrat who will face Behr in November, Mendocino County Supervisor Ernest F. Banker, spent $2,488 and took in $3,248. Banker had token opposition from Leslie A. Grant, who spent less than $500. Peace and Freedom Party nominee Toni Novak-Sutley also spent less than $500.

In the state Board of Equalization's Third District, the GOP nominee, Tally Mastrangelo, spent $2,063 and took in $3,493, including $599 from George F. Jewett Jr. of Ross, vice president of the Potlach Corp. His defeated rival, Edward J. Sullivan, spent less than $500, as did the unopposed Democratic incumbent, William M. Bennett, and American Independent Party nominee, J. W. Stancliffe.

In county races, incumbent Supt. of Schools Virgil S. Hollis spent $15,464 and took in $12,127, including $2,955 of his own money. His challenger, Joseph D. Gargiulo, spent $8,047 and took in $7,600, including $3,307 of his own funds.

Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste spent $10,030 to get reelected, and had $10,919 in receipts, including $2,023 loaned by him. He defeated Betty Machado, who spent $1,219 and took in $823.

Another reelected incumbent, Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales, spent $17,070 against $17,404 in receipts, including a $1,100 personal loan. Challenger Edward Krug spent $22,631 and took in $22,982, including $2,500 loaned by his wife. Harry A. Connick spent $6,785 and had $6,593 in receipts, including $1,400 of his own money.

In the Tamalpais High School District, winner Elaine Brockbank apparently spent $3,677, including $1,489 of her own funds. Her report, like many others, did not make clear how funds were handled. Her opponent, Dr. Darrell Smith, spent and took in $1,663.

Many other reports were incomplete and inaccurate, but the elections office said it will police them to assure they are done correctly.

Dr. Ervin Jindrich, who unseated the incumbent coroner, Dr. Donovan O. Cooke, spent $3,284, all of it his own money. Cooke spent $1,765, with receipts totaling $3,090.

In the crowded race for county clerk, the runoff candidates are Peter C. Mever and John F. Musser Jr. Meyer spent $6,447 and took in $4,966, including $1,564 of his own money. Musser spent $1,689 and took in $1,858.

Spending by the four unsuccessful candidates for clerk was led by Howard Hanson, who spent $4,950 and took in $6,751, including a $5,000 loan from his wife. Frank Bigley spent $644 and took in $500, Nadean Chapman spent $1,732 and took in $412, and Junetta Younglove spent $1,666 and took in $410.

Recorder Noel T. Giacomini spent $1,961 getting reelected and had $1,725 in receipts, including $500 from Marin Title Association. His challenger, Klaus Martin spent $2,743 and took in $2,750.

Expenditures and receipts by uncontested county officers were: Supervisor Robert A. Roumiguiere, $6,113 and $6,793; Treasurer Tax-Collector Stanley J. Fontez, $538 each; Assessor Bert W. Broemmel, $570 each; Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, $615 and $300, and Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos, $1,070 and $1,480.

In Marin Municipal Water District's division 1 race, short forms declaring their campaigns cost less than $500 were filed by Rufus B. Aylwin, Graham H. McPhail Jr. and Betty Forry.

A separate report by the California Real Estate Political Action Committee showed contributions of $250 each to Mrs. Forry, Dr. William J. Filante in Division 3 and Ben Farlatti in Division 5. The Committee for a Conservation Majority gave $187 each to Richard J. Boylan in Division 1, Joan Seminario in Division 3 and Dorothy Gibson in Division 5.

Boylan spent $1,469 and took in $1,710. Also in Division 1, Winifred S. Frederick spent $597 and took in $265.

Dr. Filante spent $3,486 and had $3,337 in receipts, including an unrepaid personal loan of $412 of his own money. Mrs. Seminario spent $1,314 and had $1,380 in receipts. Margaret Neese spent under $500.

In Division 4, winner Pamela Lloyd spent and had receipts of $731, while Robert Walker spent $537 and took in $567.

In Division 5, winner Polly Smith spent $3,609 and took in $3,693, including her own contribution of $104 and loan of $1,025. Farlatti spent $2,772 and had $2,672 in receipts. Mrs. Gibson spent $1,792 and took in $2,205.

Also in Division 5, Robert Lee Grant spent $5,815 and took in $3,762. Willard A. Hall spent under $500.

Short forms declaring campaigns costing under $500 were filed by all candidates for Novato, Ross Valley, Homestead and Almonte sanitary districts. These forms also were filed by candidates for the Democratic and Republican county central committees, except for Republican Jane S. Alexander and Democrats Robert E. Mertle, John Shellenberger Jr., Shelagh Considine, Ruth L. Lederman and Catherine J. Waycott.

Health Chief Fowler Quits

George Fowler, chief of Marin County health services administration, has resigned to accept a similar position with San Joaquin County.

His resignation, effective July 26, was announced yesterday to members of his staff.

Fowler, 49, has served about a year as chief of health services administration under the health and human services director. He said he is leaving for personal reasons.

He retired from the Navy to accept the Marin County position, charged with giving administrative support to the county's various health and mental health agencies.

Event To Aid Church's Fund

An art exhibit will be presented July 28 at the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church in connection with a performance of chamber music.

The exhibit will include paintings by Marin artists. Dorothy Sayer, San Rafael artist, is in charge of the show.

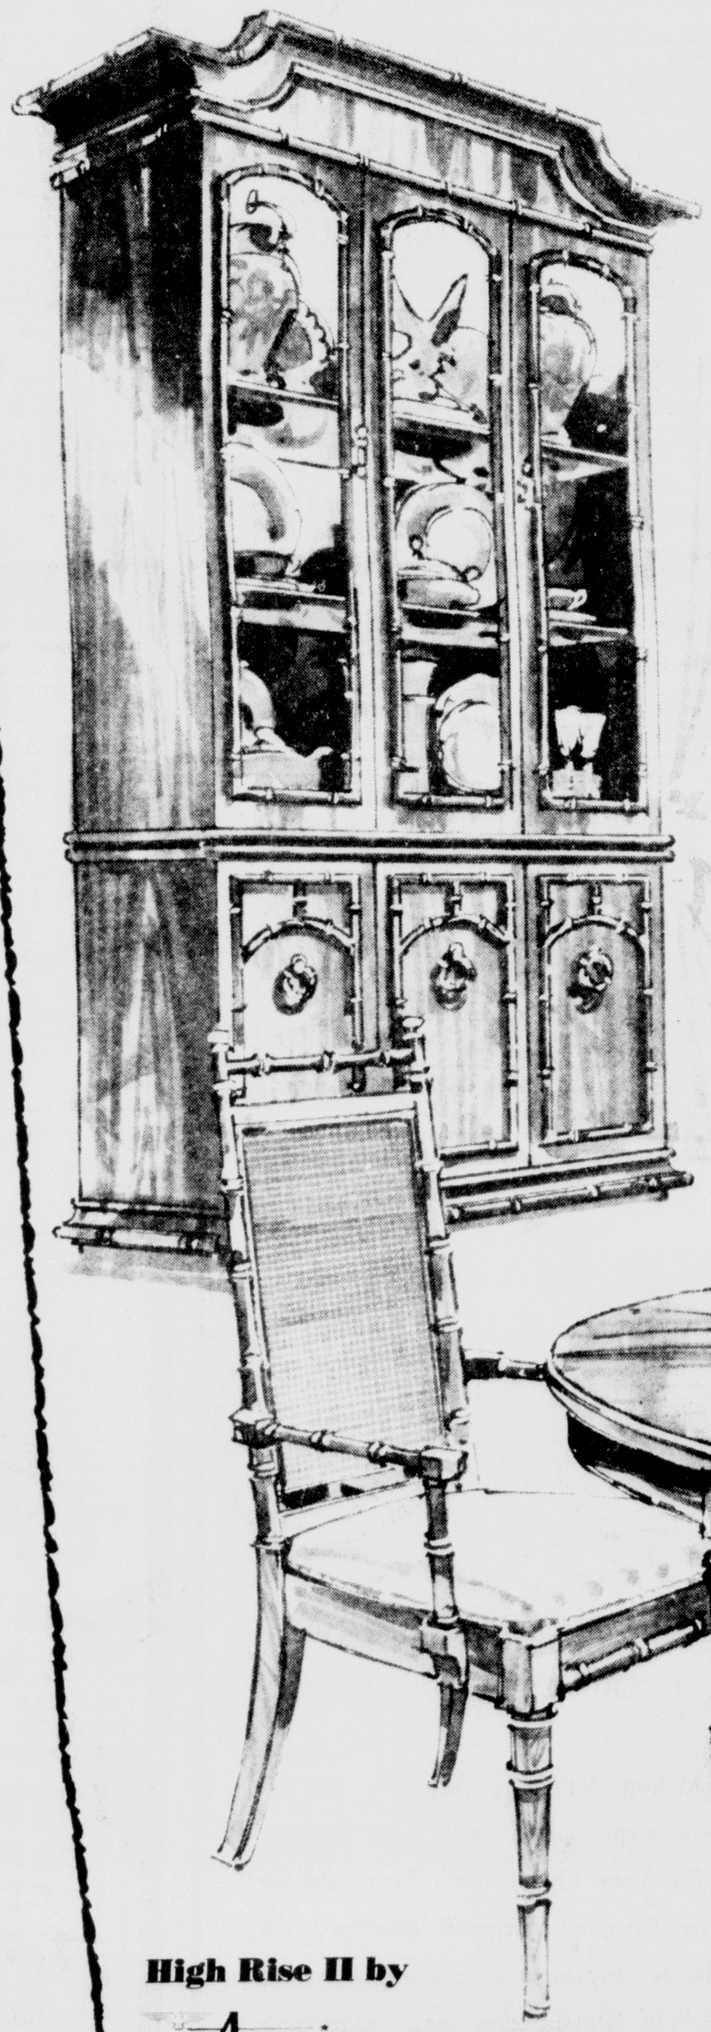

The concert will include works by Bach, Kingsley, Bloch and Saint-Saens. It begins at 3 p.m.

The paintings will be on display at the church at 635 Adrian Way from 1 p.m. on.

The events will benefit the piano fund of the church.

Giants' 'Young Seaver' Beats Mets

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Some managers have all the luck.

When Wes Westrum was managing the New York Mets in 1967 he had the pleasure of seeing Tom Seaver develop into one of baseball's best pitchers, and he has never forgotten it.

Now, Westrum is managing the San Francisco Giants and he has a young pitcher with the same kind of promise—John D'Acquisto.

"I see a lot of similarity between the two," Westrum said Wednesday after his Giants had beaten the Mets 6-2 with D'Acquisto picking up his eighth victory.

"Seaver, though, had only his good fastball and a slider when he first came up to the majors," Westrum recalled. "D'Acquisto has both those pitches plus an excellent curveball. It's had to say right now but I'd guess D'Acquisto has an excellent chance to develop into the same kind of consistent winner Seaver is.

"He's only a baby, baseball-wise, and he is learning his way around. Right now John is having some problems with his control because I think he tries too hard. Once he gets a good feel of what he is doing he'll be all right."

Seaver was 16-13 in his rookie year and D'Acquisto is halfway there. He says he isn't interested in his record so much as trying to learn something every time out.

D'Acquisto had a no-hitter for 4 2-3 innings when Cleon Jones, given a life on a dropped foul tip by catcher Dave Rader, singled sharply to score New York's first run. John Milner followed with another clean hit for the second run and as things turned out that was the last hit off D'Acquisto. But with one out in the seventh and after having made 145 pitches, D'Acquisto left and Randy Moffitt finished up.

"You don't want to hurt a young boy like that," Westrum said. "I treated Seaver the same way. I babied him along until he could do it on his own."

D'Acquisto said he knew what he did wrong.

"I started to think about a no-hitter," said the 22-year-old right-hander from San Diego. "That was a big mistake. I should have concentrated more on pitching my game. When you get in a spot like that you tend to be too fine. I'm not accomplished enough to pitch that way. I think I learned something At least I hope I did. For me, this is a learning year. Next year I should do a lot better."

Bobby Bonds, with his sore ribs tightly bandaged, ripped a two-run homer in the first and then drove in a third run with a fifth inning sacrifice fly to make things easy for D'Acquisto. Garry Maddox had a double and two singles and stole three bases in another fine performance.

Today is an off day for both the Giants and Mets. San Francisco next plays Montreal while New York goes to San Diego.

Boosters Return From Cooperstown

Allan Murray, a man who rarely loses his cool and seems unaware of bad times while all those around him are panicking, is a very excited person of late.

It stems from the last Giants Boosters trip to Montreal, New York City and the Hall of Fame. Murray is a Kentfield insurance exec who has a rough time fitting sales in between trips of the Northern California Giants Boosters, of which he is president.

The last excursion for Murray and his band of Giant faithfuls went from July 4 through 13 and they went 102 strong, bulging the sides of a chartered jetliner.

"It was the most enjoyable and most memorable of all the Giant Boosters' trips," said Murray without a quiver. That's saying something, since the boosters have been going strong for eight years and have been on trips to Hawaii, Japan and throughout the U.S.

IT WASN'T THE BASEBALL in New York and Montreal (the Giants won three and lost three) that excited Murray so much. It was the two-day trip to Cooperstown, N.Y. and the Hall of Fame.

The little town of Coopers will never be the same. Can you imagine what the townspeople thought when two buses stopped in the heart of the community and all these bodies spilled out? It was a mass assault on the house that Abner Doubleday built.

"Ken Smith, the director of the Baseball Hall of Fame, treated us like kings and queens," Murray said. "He told me it was the largest out of state baseball group to ever visit the Hall of Fame."

One of the first things Murray and his followers had to do was to see first hand the plaque honoring Fairfax's Vernon (Lefty) Gomez. He stopped long enough in front of the plaque with Cindee Pareto of San Rafael to get a picture taken. And if you thought all the members of the Giants Boosters were senior citizens you didn't look at the above picture. Cindee is not exactly ready for retirement.

THE TRIP FROM MONTREAL to Cooperstown was five hours through the Adirondack Mountains. Once there, the boosters stayed at the Otesaga Hotel and, according to Murray, lived the life of luxury.

"The boosters gained an average of 6½ pounds each," Murray said with a glance at his waistline.

Among the highlights listed by Murray were a very lifelike wax figure of Roberto Clemente, a room full of Babe Ruth mementos and information dear to all baseball trivia buffs.

"But there's more to Cooperstown than the Hall of Fame," says Murray. "There's golf, swimming, fishing and there are shops to browse through, antique shops and auctions." He sounded like a one-man Cooperstown Chamber of Commerce.

THE BOOSTERS WERE also given a special showing of the 1962 World Series when the Yankees beat the Giants four games to three. About second baseman Bobby Richardson's game-winning catch of a Willie McCovey line drive, Murray said, "I've seen it so many times, but I was still hoping he would drop it this time."

Murray already is making plans for a repast visit by the boosters next season, "but this time it's going to be four days. There's just too much to see in two days."

The boosters' leader said there was going to be a special guest on next year's trip. "Lefty Gomez has already told me he would make the Cooperstown trip with us next year."

Lefty should feel right at home there.

Novato Wins Forfeit In Babe Ruth Tourney

SONOMA — Novato American won a 7-0 forfeit game over Southern Marin National yesterday in the Babe Ruth District 9 tournament for 13-year-olds when Southern Marin failed to take the field in the top of the fifth inning. Novato was leading at the time, 27-4.

In the opening game at Arnold Field, West Side of Santa Rosa defeated Santa Rosa, 9-6.

In that Novato drubbing, Ted Ronshausen had three doubles and a triple and Ben Lucas a double and three singles.

The double elimination tourney continues tonight with Redwood Empire against Rohnert Park at 5:30 and Central Marin against Novato National at 8:30.

Burial Set In South For Dean

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Dizzy Dean's final resting place will be in the South he loved so well.

Funeral services will be held Saturday morning in Wiggins, Miss., for Dean, the son of an itinerant cotton-picker who pitched his way into baseball's Hall of Fame. Burial will follow.

Dean, Carl Hubbell and Lefty Grove are ranked by baseball historians as the great pitchers of the 1930s, but Dean perhaps loomed largest in the hearts of fans because his blazing fastball was accompanied by a wit, cockiness, down-home twang and special off field warmth.

He represented baseball probably better than almost any of his peers once he was through as a player. He spoke at countless dinners and banquets all over the nation and constantly hammered the theme that baseball was the greatest game of all and that every parent should encourage his son to play it.

He carried his love of the game into the broadcast booth after a sore arm cut short his career in 1941. Names and figures were not his speciality, but he soon carved out a unique place with his enthusiasm, fractured English and folksy sayings.

Some teachers demanded he be removed from the nation's airwaves for teaching young listeners bad English, but he replied "I'm learnin'em good baseball."

Dean's first name was Jay although he often said it was Jerome. He was born in Lucas, Ark., Holdenville, Okla., or Bond, Miss., and was 64, or maybe 63, when he died.

Dean was fond of confusing people about his birth and often gave newsmen different versions, explaining "them ain't lies, them's scoops."

He joined organized baseball with St. Joseph of the Western League in the heart of the Depression in 1930.

The hard-throwing 200-pound right-hander was 18-15 as a St. Louis Cardinal rookie in 1932 and led the National League in strikeouts with 191. He was 20-18 in 1933 with 199 strikeouts and had one of baseball's all-time stellar seasons in leading the 1934 Gas-House Gang Cardinals to the World Championship.

Little Leaguer Strikes Out 15 In Tourney Win

Wayne Bryant, having better luck than the Bryant who pitches for the San Francisco Giants, struck out 15 batters and allowed only three hits in hurling San Rafael American past San Geronimo, 8-2, yesterday in Mill Valley in the Marin County Little League team tournament.

Hamilton-Loma Verde edged Novato National, 4-3, at Hamilton Field. Marlon Warren, Novato National Phillies' star who pitched a one-hit victory the day before, hit a home run yesterday.

In other quarter-final games yesterday, Novato American defeated Fairfax, 8-3, and Twin Cities whipped San Anselmo, 14-6.

The semi-final schedule tomorrow night at 6 o'clock shows San Rafael American vs. Hamilton Loma Verde at Larkspur-Corte Madera School, and Novato American vs. Twin Cities at Central School in Fairfax. Winners of these games will meet Saturday at 1 p.m. at Mary E. Silveira School, Marinwood, for the championship.

VIDA WINS

Jackson Flashes All-Star Style

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Oakland's Reggie Jackson put on another display of speed and power Wednesday that showed why he got over three million votes in the All-Star game balloting.

Jackson's sixth inning dash from third base to home under the desperate tag of pitcher Mike Cuellar, who had uncorked a wild pitch, scored the A's' first run in a 2-0 win over the Baltimore Orioles.

Two innings later, Jackson raised his batting average to .326 with a run-scoring double that scored Sal Bando, who singled.

Jackson's second single and a double by Joe Rudi sent Reggie to third base against Cuellar, who saw his wild pitch partially blocked by catcher Earl Williams. Cuellar made a swipe at Jackson when Williams relayed the ball but he slid across safely before Cuellar tagged him on the hand.

Jackson's hustle and batting power made Vida Blue a 10-game winner thanks to a ninth inning assist from relief ace Rollie Fingers. With the bases loaded and two outs, Fingers got pinch-hitter Rich Coggins to ground out and picked up his eighth save.

"All those votes give me a lot of confidence," Jackson insisted. "It's a morale booster, a shot in the arm for any ballplayer. I like a pat on the back once in a while, the same as the next guy."

With five straight wins, including a sweep of the three-game series against Baltimore, Jackson credited his club for "playing great as a team" and said "each guy is playing like a star."

With 58 runs batted in, Jackson has advanced to within three RBIs of club leader Rudi. "I have to get 100 RBIs to earn my keep," claimed Jackson, who has now driven in 10 runs in his last 12 games for the streaking A's.

Cuellar absorbed his sixth defeat against 12 wins and was scheduled to pitch Saturday with only two days rest against California.

ABA Head Resigns; Barnes To St. Louis

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Basketball Association rebounded from months of rumors that it would collapse, pulled three fastbreaks maneuvers Wednesday and now appears stronger than ever with Commissioner Mike Storen stepping down to buy the Memphis franchise and Providence All-American Marvin Barnes signing an estimated $2.2-million contract with the new St. Louis team.

Tedd Munchak, owner of the Carolina Cougars for the past three years, finalized the sale of the franchise to a group of New York businessmen headed by 41-year old marketing executive Harry Weltman early in the day to clear the way for him, Munchak, to replace Storen as the ABA Commissioner.

But crucial to both moves and essential to the ABA's effort to keep pace with the National Basketball Association was the announcement that the Cougars, who will be moved to St.

6 Dolphins Cross Lines; 49ers, Raiders Refrain

MIAMI (UPI) — Six Miami Dolphins veterans crossed picket lines Wednesday and reported to training camp. Coach Don Shula said other striking veterans could jeopardize bonuses by refusing to report to camp.

Center Jim Langer led the six Dolphins veterans who crossed unmolested through picket lines and reported on scheduled to the world champions' training camp at Biscayne College.

The other veterans reporting Wednesday were safety Jake Scott, tight end Jim Mandich, linebacker Bob Matheson, quarterback Earl Morrall and reserve fullback Don Nottingham.

The Dolphins also announced the signing of running back Mercury Morris to a multi-year contract and said he would report to the Biscayne College training camp today.

Shula said the Dolphins' management wanted to "just remind players" of a new bonus stipulation.

"By accepting bonus money up front," Shula said, "they agree to report and practice."

Pat Peppler, Miami's player personnel director, said the bonus rider affects veterans who have either signed new or renegotiated contracts in 1974.

"We're not taking a hard line on this," Peppler said. "We're merely alerting them to this obligation they signed in the agreements made. It's not a threat, yet. At a certain point, however, it may be necessary for the club to do something about it."

Shula said he expected two other veterans, punter Larry Seiple and receiver Howard Twilley, to report to camp later this week.

Today is the last day that veterans are supposed to show up at the San Francisco 49ers' training camp, but nobody is expected to cross the picket line.

Coach Dick Nolan, nonetheless, said Wednesday he felt he could field a "respectable team" for any exhibition game played without the regulars.

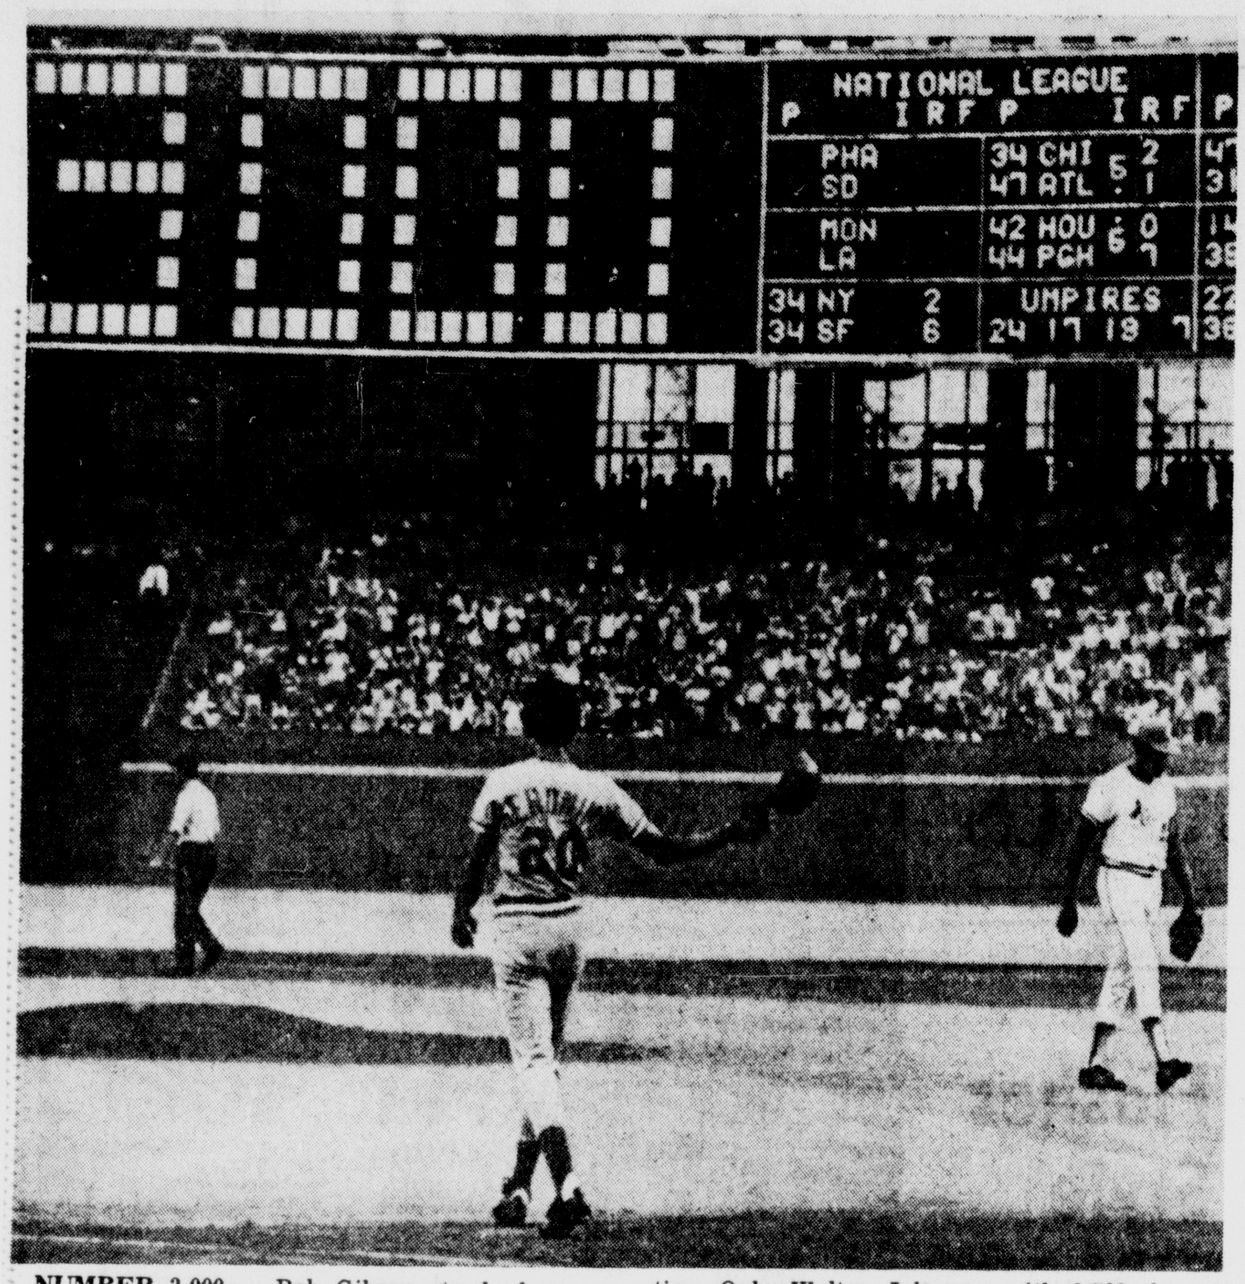

Asked to pinpoint those who had impressed him in workouts so far, Nolan named running back Sammy Johnson from North Carolina, free agent halfback Don Johnson and guard Jim Schneitz from Missouri, tight end-tackle Keith Fahnhorst from Minnesota, running back Manfred Moore from USC and tackle Mike Raines from Alabama.

In Santa Rosa, a few Oakland Raider veterans showed up to walk the picket line Wednesday, but the rumored crossing of the line by some of the Raider regulars never occurred.

O.J. Simpson was supposed to show up to help the pickets, but the Buffalo star never made it.

NUMBER 3,000 — Bob Gibson strode from the mound (right) after making Cesar Geronimo his 3,000th major league strikeout victim. Only Walter Johnson, with 3,508, has more in baseball history.

A Star Who Hits Singles

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

A Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder once popularized the slogan that "home run hitters drive Cadillacs."

But the Pirates now have an outfielder who thinks he can travel in fine style by hitting singles.

Ralph Kiner was the Pittsburgh slugger of the early '50s who spurned singles because home run hitters get the cash and glory. But a generation later, Richie Zisk is content to hit singles.

Zisk, who drove in four runs last night with two singles and a double as the Pirates routed Houston 11-3, says, "I changed my batting style from a power hitter in the minors to a singles RBI hitter in the majors because I wanted to play every day and make more money.

"I could hit more homers if I used a skinny handled bat and crowded the plate. But I'm more valuable when I'm consistent and that's when I help the team."

For all practical purposes, Zisk replaced the late Roberto Clemente in right field for the Pirates although it took the Pirates a while to get Zisk out there because former manager Bill Virdon tried the ill-fated switch of Manny Sanguillen to right last spring.

In the other games, Montreal downed Los Angeles 5-4, Cincinnati topped St. Louis 6-4 in 12 innings, Atlanta downed Chicago 7-2 and San Diego routed Philadelphia 15-1.

Expos 5, Dodgers 4

The Dodgers are faltering. They're being haunted by the memories of last year's collapse. Their West lead was sliced to 5 ½ games by the loss to Montreal as they blew a 4-0 lead. Don Carrithurs pitched seven shutout innings for Montreal. The Dodgers suffered a key blow, too, when Tommy John, who has a 13-3 record, had to leave the game in the fourth inning with a pulled muscle in the area of his pitching elbow. The Dodgers aren't sure how serious it is.

Reds 6, Cards 4

Cincinnati keeps gaining ground on the Dodgers. George Foster doubled home two runs in the 12th inning to beat St. Louis and spoil the celebration for Bob Gibson's 3,000th strikeout. Gibson got the milestone in the second inning when he fanned Cesar Geronimo. Gibson went seven innings and wasn't involved in the decision.

Braves 7, Cubs 2

Atlanta erupted for three runs in the seventh inning to snap a 2-2 tie and start on the way to the win over Chicago. Dusty Baker's ground-rule double snapped the tie and Rowland Office followed with a two-run single.

Padres 15, Phils 1

Bobby Tolan hit a pair of three-run homers to pace San Diego to the easy victory over Philadelphia. Tolan clubbed the homers, his eighth and ninth of the year, in successive times at bat in the second and third innings.

Twins, Angels Agree— It's All In The Mind

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Dick Williams and Frank Quilici have one thing in common as managers: they think mental attitude is as important as physical ability.

Both made the same point last night in explaining why the California Angels and Minnesota Twins have hit winning strides after experiencing brutal slumps. The Angels have won five of their last six games while the Twins have won nine of their last 12.

"They've never been winners before and now are beginning to win," said Williams after the Angels' 7-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians. "It's a new experience. I've been a winner and know what it's like. Now it's their turn and they're beginning to like it."

"The combination of hot weather and the tough schedule takes it's toll," said Quilici after the Twins whipped the Milwaukee Brewers, 10-5. "But we're playing exceptionally good ball and developing a winning attitude."

Lee Stanton hit two-run singles in the eighth and ninth innings as the Angels overcame a 5-0 Cleveland lead. The Angels were held to just two hits in the first seven innings but then rallied for four runs in the eighth and three in the ninth to hand the Indians their sixth straight loss.

Chicago whipped Detroit 7-1, Texas beat New York 2-0 and Boston topped Kansas City 6-3 in other American League games.

White Sox 7, Tigers 1

Wilbur Wood pitched a three-hitter for his 15th win and Dick Allen hit his 24th homer to lead the White Sox to their victory over the Tigers, who have lost 10 of their last 11 games. Wood allowed only one hit over the last 7 2-3 innings in raising his record to 15-11. Woody Fryman was the losing pitcher.

Rangers 2, Yankees 0

Toby Harrah's two-run second inning homer was all Jim Bibby needed as he pitched a three-hitter which squared his record at 12-12. Harrah's homer came off Pat Dobson, who was tagged with his 12th defeat against seven wins. Harrah's total of 14 homers this season is one more than he hit in three previous seasons.

Red Sox 6, Royals 3

Carl Yastrzemski and Tommy Harper homered and Roger Moret pitched a six-hitter to win his third game for the Red Sox. Marty Pattin yielded four runs in as many innings, and was the loser for the Royals, who dropped six games behind the A's in the AL West.

STOREN RESIGNS

Louis and renamed the Spirits, had signed Barnes, a 6-foot-9 center-forward who was the second highest draft choice of the NBA behind UCLA's Bill Walton.

Barnes is a "can't miss" prospect, according to pro coaches and scouts, who combines size, strength, speed and agility. He signed with the ABA instead of the NBA Philadelphia 76ers, he said, "because of its dedication in getting the best of all college players."

Barnes, who once said in jest he'd work in a factory before he'd sign for less than a million dollars, walked into the news conference here with a lunch pail and a Spirits tee-shirt, opened the metal container and pulled out a signed contract plus a fistful of bills. He reportedly turned down a bid from the 76ers that fell short of the ABA's offer but was in excess of $1-million.

"I'm glad he signed that contract," said Mrs. Lula Barnes as she looked affectionately at her son. "I didn't want him to work in a factory either."

"It shouldn't take too long for me to adjust to the pros," Marvin said. "I've played with some guys who could make the pros right now, like David Thompson. I am a dedicated player and should have no problems making the adjustment."

Munchak, who sold All-Star guard Ted McClain, traded Mack Calvin to Denver and waived high-priced, low-output center Jim Chones out of the league soon after the past season ended in what appeared to be a series of moves that would leave the Carolina franchise a mere skeleton, may simply have been trimming his expenses in order to meet the monetary demands of Barnes.

Barnes will join Billy Cunningham and Joe Caldwell as the leading attractions in St. Louis next season as pro basketball returns there for the first time since the NBA Hawks moved to Atlanta in 1968. The Spirits will share the 20,000-seat St. Louis Auditorium with the National Hockey League St. Louis Blues.

During Storen's one-year tenure as ABA commissioner he was extremely critical of Charlie Finley.

"A good owner, with proper promotion and a good staff could make Memphis one of the most attractive and prosperous franchises in the league," Storen once said. "Finley hasn't done anything to promote the club there. The people in Memphis love basketball but it (the ABA club) was presented to them in the worst possible way."

Now Storen will have his chance.

Storen helped the ABA gain a national television contract for playoff games last season with the Hughes network and was instrumental in launching a $300-million anti-trust suit against the NBA last January that still is unresolved. Before becoming commissioner, he was general manager of the Kentucky Colonels and helped make them one of the most successful teams in the ABA.

Munchak now becomes the fifth ABA commissioner and is promising to maintain Storen's desire for expansion with a "methodical and business-like approach."

Four-Hit Win

Gene Burris pitched a four-hitter to lead Independent Electric to a 3-2 victory over Jack's Untouchables in a San Anselmo adult softball league game at Hidden Valley School.

Gaters Nip Houston By A Point

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Golden Gaters mixed doubles team of Ilana Kloss and Frew McMillan downed Houston's John Newcombe and Emily Foster 6-3 Wednesday night to pull out a 26-25 win in World Team Teannis.

On the final point, Newcombe, world's reigning pro champ, tried to blast a point past Miss Kloss, who returned it for the game-winner as the big crowd of 4100 roared its approval.

The match was see-saw all the way as Lesley Hunt of the hosts edged Karen Krantczke of the Texans 7-6 and Dick Bohrnstedt of the Gaters beat Wimbledon standout Dick Stockton 6-4. But then Krantczke-Foster took Hunt-Kloss 6-4 in women's doubles and the Gaters led the E-Z Riders only 17-16.

Houston seemingly iced it when Newcombe-Stockton beat Bohrnstedt-McMillan 6-3 in doubles, which meant that the Gaters had to win the finals mixed doubles by 6-3 to cinch the match. They did just that.

TREVINO TALKS GOLF

The Wiggle Waggle

By LEE TREVINO

The waggle is what you do to get ready to hit a ball. It's like having a new car without a key. It's waiting to be driven, but motionless until the key starts the series of actions that get it moving.

A golf ball is the same way. Some guys waggle the club and do funny things with their mouth. It's part of the forward press and waggle.

If it helps you get ready to stick out your tongue and wiggle your big toe, do it. That's what the waggle is for — to get club and muscles working together to hit a little ball to distant places.

It's an individual thing. Jack Nicklaus couldn't use Billy Casper's waggle, and Billy might whiff one if he tried to use Gary Player's dipsy-do with his right knee as he moves into his backswing.

Watch Julius Boros. He's always moving, either on a putt or a drive. It would have helped Ben Hogan to waggle his putter. He just glared at it, and froze.

Playing without a waggle makes it tougher on you in pressure situations as you get older. It's the series of movements that eases tension.

The main thing is not to hit a ball from a motionless position. The waggle gets you moving, and it's hard to stop a machine in motion.

All-Star Football Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the first Marin-Sonoma All-Star Bowl, the football game matching high school stars from the two counties, are now on sale at 13 locations in Marin.

The game will be held Saturday, Aug. 17, at 8 p.m. at San Rafael High School.

It is sponsored by the Ross Valley Kiwanis Club, which uses proceeds for its various charitable activities, including a Boy Scout troop, summer camps and guide dogs for the blind.

The Kiwanians were sponsors of the Marin North-South game, which the Marin-Sonoma game replaces, from 1965 through 1973.

Ticket locations:

Mill Valley — Ray's Barber Shop, 144 Throckmorton Avenue; Lawson-Dyer Pharmacy, 230 East Blithedale Avenue; Keane's Meats in the Mill Valley Market, 12 Corte Madera Avenue; Stan's For Sports, Reed and Knoll Roads.

San Rafael — Taveggia and Brusati, 1345 Fourth Street; Stan's For Sports, Third Street and Grand Avenue.

Dodger John Fumes; Nixon Mourns Dizzy

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

John, whose ERA is 2.50, wasn't picked by New York Mets' manager Yogi Berra. Berra picked John's teammates Andy Messersmith (10-2) and reliever Mike Marshall (11-4) but said he left John out because he was scheduled to pitch Sunday for the Dodgers. The All-Star game is in Pittsburgh Tuesday.

"In all my baseball career, I'd have to say this is the biggest disappointment I've had," John said. "What's the excuse? Berra or (commissioner) Bowie Kuhn or whoever is saying a team can't have three pitchers on the All-Star team is a lot of bunk.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — President Nixon yesterday mourned the death of 1930s baseball great Dizzy Dean, who he called "a man for all generations."

"To my generation of Americans," Nixon said in a statement, "Dizzy Dean will always be remembered as the blazing young fastballer who led the Gashouse Gang of St. Louis to the pinnacle of baseball glory.

"To the young, Dizzy will also be remembered as the sportscaster who brought an extra touch of excitement and color to every game he covered. Dizzy Dean was indeed a man for all generations, and America is saddened today by his death.

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Outfielder-first baseman Tom McCraw was sold by the California Angels to the Cleveland Indians yesterday in a straight cash deal.

In 56 games with the Angels this year, McGraw, 33, batted .286, hit three home runs and batted in 17 runs. The Angels said they will call up Bruce Bochte from their Salt Lake City club later this week to replace McCraw. Bochte, 23, is the leading hitter of the Pacific Coast League with a .363 batting average.

Hockey

Patrick, younger brother of Seals' forward Craig Patrick, spent the last three years with the Denver Spurs of the Western Hockey League, the Blues' farm club. St. Louis called him up for one game last season.

Serafini spent last season with the Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the WHL. He played two games for the Seals at the end of the year.

Harness Racing

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Jay Silverheels, best known for his role as Tonto at the side of the Lone Ranger, made his professional debut as a harness race driver at Louisville Downs here last night.

Silverheels guided Pebbles Time at 8-1 odds to finish third and return $2.80.

A Brutal Plunge For WFL Gate

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Judging by the latest returns, last week's encouraging World Football League attendance figures may have been only a case of "opening night" curiosity.

The fledgling football conference began Week II of its existence Wednesday night and the crowd figures, although still higher than many skeptics predicted, took a dramatic downward plunge.

In New York, where the Stars were making their debut in dilapidated Downing Stadium, 17,943—1,200 admitted freebees —showed up to watch the hometowners blow a 26-point halftime lead in losing 32-29 to the Birmingham Americans.

The Chicago Fire drew 29,508 in winning its second straight game at home, 25-22 over the Jacksonville Sharks. The turnout, however, was quite a drop from last week's estimated 42,000 showups at spacious Soldiers Field.

And in Houston, even a "nickel beer" come-on drew only 26,227 to see Texans blank Philadelphia 11-0 in the 50,000- seat Astrodome. Detroit, meanwhile, drew half its expected crowd when 10,631 showed up to see the host Wheels get edged by Florida 18-14 in the final minutes of play.

For 30 minutes, the insufficient lighting at New York's Downing Stadium, a converted soccer field, played to the Stars' advantage in their WFL hometown inaugural against Birmingham.

The enthusiastic crowd was treated to a most delightful first half as the Stars, who had lost a heartbreaker the week before, jumped out to a 29-3 halftime lead and looked about ready to pour it on their southern visitors.

But suddenly, the second half became a complete turnabout as Americans' quarterback George Mira began throwing touchdown strikes and by early in the fourth quarter, Birmingham trailed by only four points.

"It was really a matter of my receivers getting used to the poor lighting," said Mira, who fired TD strikes of 20 yards to Ted Powell and four yards to Al Jenkins before running a third score from the one.

Nevertheless, it appeared the Stars would still be able to hold onto the victory when they stopped a Birmingham drive at the Americans' 43 late in the final quarter.

Florida 18 Detroit 14

Tom Reamon slashed over from the five with 1:37 to play to deliver Florida's victory over Detroit. Like Birmingham, it was the second straight triumph for the Blazers. Ex-New York Jet quarterback Bob Davis connected with Matt Maslowski for a six-yard scoring pass that accounted for the other Blazers' score. A disappointing crowd of 10,631.

Houston 11 Philadelphia 0

Defensive back Daryl Johnson intercepted King Corcoran's sideline pass and returned it 17 yards for one Texan score in the first period and Charlie Durkee added a 28-yard field goal in thh second stanza. The alert Houston defense turned in four interceptions in never letting the bell past the Texan 30.

Chicago 25 Jacksonville 22

Virgil Carter directed an 86-yard drive in less than four minutes to set up a 26-yard field goal by Chuck Ramsey that delivered the Fire victory with six seconds remaining to play. Rookie Mark Kellar also scored twice for Chicago, taking a 31 yard pass from Carter in the first period and plunging over from the one in the fourth.

Southern California 38, Hawaiians 31

Tony Adams completed 13-of19 passes for 208 yards and one touchdown and ran for two TDs to spark the Sun to a wild victory over the Hawaiians.

Adams completed his first nine passes, including a 17-yard touchdown to Dave Williams, as the Sun took a 15-0 halftime lead. The Hawaiians roared back with a 31-point fourth period splurge to keep the game in doubt to the final seconds.

Ali Begins Training For Foreman Fight

DEER PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Muhammad Ali began his "official" training for his Sept. 23 date with heavyweight champion George Foreman witth the comment that "I'm better now than when I met Sonny Liston the first time.

"I'm fighting better fighters now than I did then," said Ali, who stopped Liston after six rounds in 1964, "and I'm beating them easier."

The 32-year-old former heavyweight champion actually has been in training for more than a month and has cut his weight from 232 pounds to 222. He hopes to weigh 212 when he faces Foreman.

Beating the publicity tom tom for the fight for all it's worth—although he stole an anecdote from baseball Hall of Famer Satchel Paige to win a laugh—Ali insisted that his experience would prove the difference in the fight with Foreman.

"I'm not predicting a round," said Ali. "I'm just saying I'll be there at the end and will be the winner. I was beating the likes of Liston when Foreman was in junior high school."

"I'll tell you how fast I am now," he said. "the other night I turned off the light switch in my room and was back in bed before the lights were out."

Paige told that one about Cool Papa Bell, to be inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, Aug. 12, years ago.

San Rafael's Seniors Defeat Fairfax, 10-2

Dave Nichols had his second big night in a row yesterday when he led San Rafael to a 10-2 victory over Fairfax in a District 3 Senior Little League Tournament game at Albert Park.

Nichols had a double, single, three runs batted in and three runs scored. The night before he slugged a three-run home run. Dave Menary pitched a four-hitter for the win.

Marinwood goes against Hamilton in tonight's 6 o'clock winners' bracket game. With the loss last night, Fairfax was ousted from the double elimination tourney.

Novato Knicks Win, Now 8-4

WOODLAND — Novato Knickerbockers remained on the heels of Santa Rosa for the lead in the Western Division of the Sacramento Rural League with a 10-1 victory over Woodland Oaks yesterday.

The Knicks have an 8-4 record and Santa Rosa is 7-3. Those teams meet Saturday in a doubleheader at Doyle Field in Santa Rosa.

Novato scored three unearned runs in the sixth inning without a hit, on a series of walks, wild pitches and past balls. The clincher was a six-hit, seven-run eighth inning. John Kidder had a two-run single in that inning. Winning pitcher Jay Suder went all the way, hurling a five-hitter.

Near End, SLA Girl Wrote Home

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — While the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army was robbing a bank, amassing an arsenal of weapons and eluding authorities with kidnaped Patricia Hearst, SLA member Camilla Hall also was concerned about a birthday present for her mother.

In a letter found beneath her charred remains following the May 17 Los Angeles shootout in which she and five other SLA members died, Miss Hall apologizes to her mother for being unable to get to Illinois for her birthday.

The letter was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. George P. Hall of Lincolnwood, Ill., and was published yesterday in the San Francisco Examiner with names deleted by authorities.

"I sent . . . $5 and a note with this, saying that I was on the road and hadn't been able to get anything for your birthday, Mom, and would they please buy you some pretty flowers and hand deliver them to you with this letter to you.

"I'm sorry I can't promise to be able to do this on our special family days, but know that I remember them and send my love on many more days than just those."

She also cautioned her parents to beware of FBI "bugging" methods.

"I should warn you that the FBI can 'bug you' through your telephone without ever stepping into your house. They can turn your telephone into a microphone that picks up even whispers up to twenty feet, even if the phone is on the hook. So you should discipline yourselves to not talk about me in the kitchen or study. Also, watch your mail closely to see if any of it is delayed or tampered with. I'm putting scotch tape around this. You should be able to tell if it's been messed with."

Miss Hall said the FBI missed her "by a matter of days in Berkeley" but added that she and the other SLA members were staying "several jumps ahead of them at all times by using our own creativity, determination to survive and to carry on the business of the revolution."

Defiance Would Be Nixon Error—Dole

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defiance by President Nixon of any Supreme Court order on White House tapes would be a tactical mistake, says Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans.

Dole said that defiance by Nixon of an order to turn the tapes over to the special Watergate prosecutor would "shatter the spines of a lot of Republican supporters" in the House if impeachment comes to a vote.

Kissinger Plans Trip To India

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger plans a trip to India but has not fixed any specific date.

Ambassador Robert Anderson said on Tuesday that Kissinger hopes to set a date when his fall schedule is known later.

ALMANAC

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Today is Thursday, July 18, the 199th day of 1974 with 166 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn. The evening star is Mars.

English novelist William Makepeace Thackeray was born July 18, 1811.

On this day in history:

In the year 64 A.D., Nero fiddled while Rome burned.

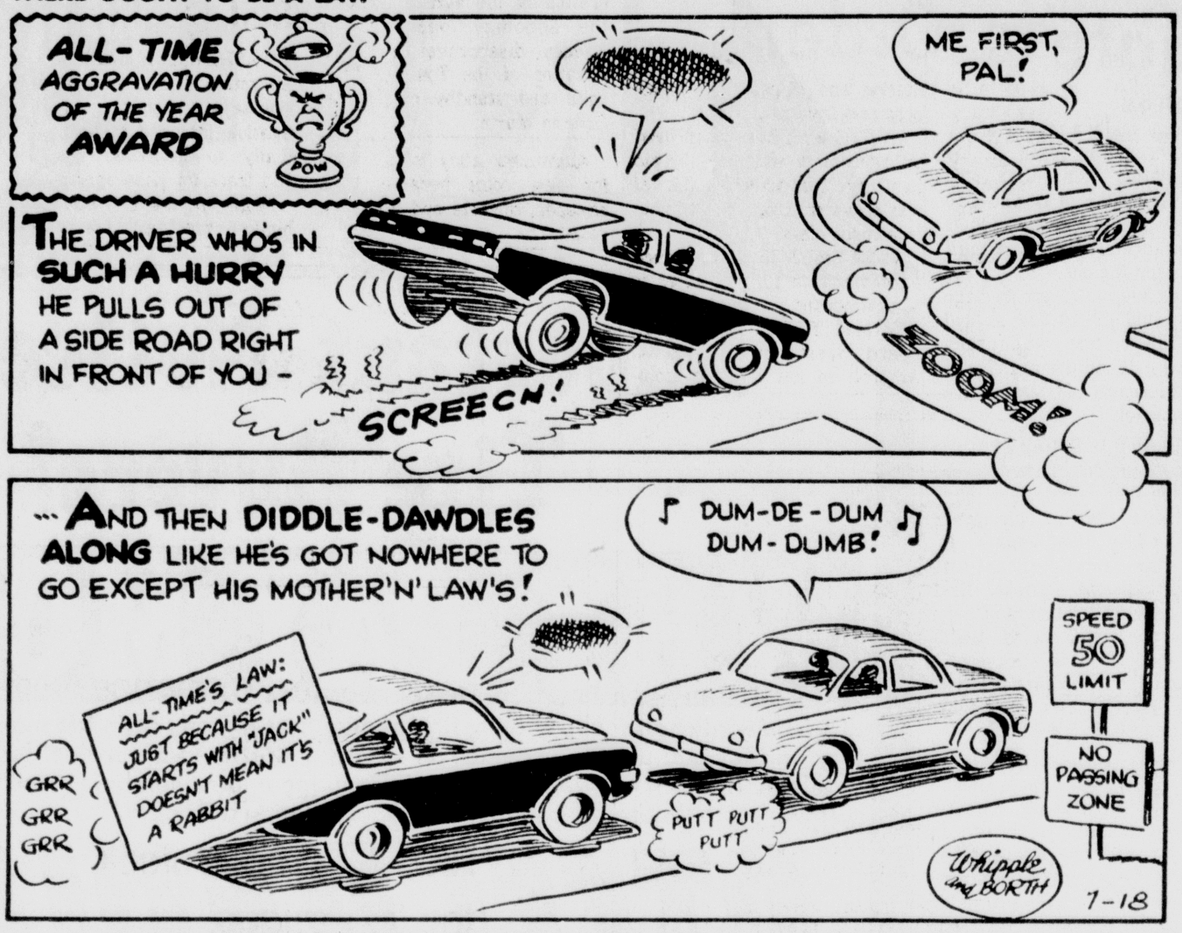

In 1938, Douglas Corrigan earned the nickname "Wrong Way" when he landed in Ireland instead of California after a flight from New York.

In 1940, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated unanimously for a third term with Henry Wallace of Iowa as his running mate. They won in November.

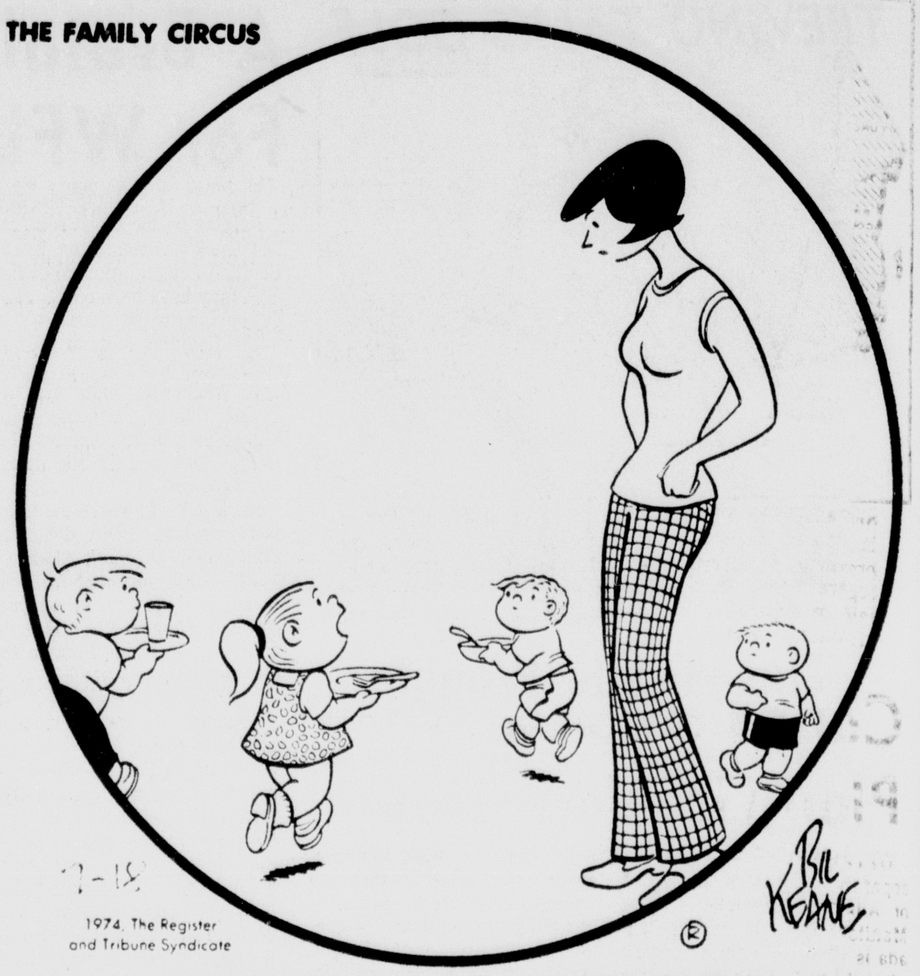

In 1951, Joseph "Jersey Joe" Walcott won the world heavyweight boxing championship by knocking out Ezzard Charles in the seventh round.

Keep Flexible In Attempting To Defeat A No-Trump Contract

It's a fine idea to lead a long suit against a no-trump contract; you hope to set up your suit and run it against declarer. If you run into a roadblock, however, keep flexible enough to change your mind and switch to another suit.

REASONABLE IDEA

West opened the three of diamonds in the hope that his high cards in spades and hearts would give him the lead often enough to develop his long suit. A reasonable idea, but it didn't work out.

Declarer played the low diamond from dummy, and East finessed with the jack. South won with the king of diamonds and promptly led a spade toward dummy's kind.

KNOWS WHOLE HAND

At this stage West knew the whole hand. South surely had the ace of clubs, for otherwise he would lead clubs at once to force out the ace.

It was clear that South held diamonds headed by K-10 also, since East would have played the ten from A-J-10. In short, West saw that immediate action was needed to stop declarer from taking six clubs, two diamonds and one spade.

West's first step was to put up the ace of spades. East followed with the nine of spades in the attempt to signal his strength. West cashed the ace of hearts to see what his partner thought about this, but East played the discouraging deuce. Hence West led his other spade through dummy's king.

Now the defenders were in position to get three spades, two hearts and the ace of diamonds. South had to settle for six clubs, one diamond and one spade to avoid going down two.

Partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠- A 6
♥- A Q 8 4
♣- 5 2.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs, the Stayman Convention.

This promises nothing as to clubs; it merely asks partner to show a major suit if he can. If partner has four hearts, you want to play the hand at game in hearts; otherwise in three no-trump.

SEPARATION PLAN — Under a proposal gaining ground in Canada since the recent liberal election victory, the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba would separate from the rest of Canada. In recent years most talk of separation has come from the French-speaking province of Quebec. (UPI Telephoto)

Canadian Separation Plan Gaining Ground

OTTAWA (UPI) — A move to separate the prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba from the rest of Canada is alive and gaining ground after the recent Liberal election victory.

The last attempted separation of the western provinces was in the late 1800's, but the move to set up an independent Prairie State was quashed by police and its leader, Louis Riel, hanged.

In recent years, the threat of separation has come from the French-speaking province of Quebec.

But now the focus has shifted westward and, according to former Conservative house leader Jed Baldwin, "the situation is not unlike that of a tinder dry forest which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

Baldwin, who represents a constituency in the oil rich province of Alberta, took aim at the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau which won re-election on the strength of support in central Canada but made little headway in the prairies.

The lopsided electoral map, he said, was an illustration of "weakening national bonds."

In an interview Tuesday, Baldwin said the separatist feeling at the grass roots was strong and "I've been around long enough to see what happens when you have the right kind of man to take advantage of the situation."

The man who has come closest to doing that is Jack Horner, another member of Parliament from Alberta, who last winter was barely headed off in his bid to break with the Conservative party and set up a western independent party.

Horner said "the underlying feeling is that Quebec and Ontario are the parents and the West are the children, and the children are grown up and want a share in how the shop is to be run.

But Horner said he does not necessarily think western separation is in the cards and added "though I am not as strong a federalist as I was, I am still a Canadian."

Even Baldwin, who said recently that the West is now more likely to separate than Quebec ever was, said he does not support the move.

Instead, he said, the Liberal government and his own Conservative Party should be made aware of western feelings against the "eastern establishment," and move to correct injustices.

"If the East continues to neglect these warnings, we could see such a movement . . . it is very much a possibility if several years go by and Trudeau does nothing about it, and our own party has to do something too," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Commerce Committee has voted to strike from a copyright revision bill the provisions for payment of royalties to singers and other performers on music recordings.

Condemnation Of Acreage For Sewer Ponds Ordered

The North Marin County Water District board has authorized the district staff to start condemnation proceedings to acquire 11 acres in the Point Reyes Station area for sewage ponds.

The action, taken Tuesday night, affects acreage just south of the town and west of Shoreline Highway, said Sage L. Morris, district auditor.

Three residents of the Point Reyes Station area asked to be included in the sewer study area. The board authorized the staff to prepare the necessary papers for its Aug. 6 meeting.

The North Marin County Water District board also:

RATES — Increased water rates from 30 to 32 cents per 100 cubic feet for Point Reyes Station, Inverness Park and Olema, and set the operating tax rate at 66 cents for Point Reyes Station and 75 cents for Inverness and Inverness Park.

WASTE WATER — Approved an agreement with the Novato Sanitary District for use of waste water from its Novato treatment plant.

AGREEMENTS — Approved agreements to furnish water to 36 new houses.

COMMITTEE — Named board president George A. Amaroli to the advisory committee to the Local Agency Formation Commission.

POSTPONED — Postponed until its Aug. 6 meeting consideration of the agreement with the Sonoma County Water Agency, disapproval of the annexation of the Town of Marshall and standby charges at Oceana Marin.

Aluminum alloy is proposed for new coins because it is cheaper, durable and corrosion resistant.

ICC To Examine Rail Quality

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission says it is starting an investigation intended to lead eventually to improved roadbeds and track for passenger trains.

The ICC said its investigation would focus on how first to upgrade all passenger track to the level existing on May 1, 1971 — the date Amtrak first started operations. The second part of the ICC investigation will center on how to upgrade track to allow speeds in excess of 110 miles per hour, the ICC said.

DR. LAWRENCE E. SHEPPARD

Mill Valley Principal Resigns

Dr. Lawrence E. Sheppard, principal of Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley for two years, has asked to return to teaching.

In a letter written to Supt. Robert D. Torrey, Sheppard said he is seeking the reassignment for "a number of factors of a personal nature."

Torrey today said Sheppard's request will be considered by Tamalpais High School District trustees Aug. 5. He said he will recommend that Sheppard be reassigned as associate principal at Tam through August and that he be assigned as a teacher on Sept. 1.

Torrey also said he will recommend that James Hanretty, Tam associate principal, be named interim principal and that selection of a principal be completed by Oct. 15.

Sheppard, 53, was named principal in June, 1972, after he had served as chairman of education extension at the University of California at Berkeley. He previously had worked as an accountant in San Francisco, a teacher-counselor at Sequoia High School in Redwood City and in administrative positions in Antioch, Daly City and Emeryville.

He was the subject of controversy earlier this year when trustees made their annual review of district principals' efficiency. Three parents from Mill Valley criticized his performance as principal and a motion that he be given notice he might not be rehired was defeated on a split vote of trustees.

Change In UFO Attitude Seen

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The head of a group that believes in flying saucers yesterday said the U.S. government is about to launch a campaign to prepare the world to accept "extra-terrestial visitors."

"I predict that within six months —possibly as little as three months —it will be obvious the official position has undergone a 180 degree reversal," said L.J. Lorenzen, director of the Tucson-based Aerial Phenomena Research Organization.

He said one reason for this might be "the fear that other nations might beat us out in announcing the reality of extra-terrestrial visitors."

San Francisco Four Alarm Fire

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A four-alarm fire early today heavily damaged a four-story building in the financial district.

The fire broke out about 5 a.m. and quickly brought four alarms and calls for additional equipment to the scene at 101 California Street.

Fire officials said it took 90 minutes to extinguish the fire, which caused an estimated $150,000 damage to the office building.

The cause was not immediately determined.

Cost Index For Elderly Asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., proposed yesterday that a consumer price index be created especially for the elderly to reflect their living costs.

The new index, said Buckley, would be used to compute increases in their Social Security benefits.

He said enactment of his bill would "insure that future cost of living increases under the Social Security Act are more attuned to, and accurately reflect, the actual needs and special expenses of the aged."

Capital Improvement Plan, Bond Issue Slated In Cotati

A $1.1 million capital improvement program for 1974-75, which includes an $825,000 November bond election, has been approved by the Cotati City Council.

The bond issue, if passed, will provide $143,000 to build wells, $547,000 to replace most of the city's leaking waterlines and $62,500 to rebuild an existing well.

The bond measure is needed to alleviate Cotati's current water crisis, caused by a population twice as large as the water system was built to serve. The problem is worsened by severe leaks throughout the existing mains.

During the last two summers, residents have been forced to reduce water consumption to a minimum to prevent shortages.

Without the water bonds, city officials maintain, the situation will grow even worse as the city's population continues to climb.

Other improvements approved by the council Tuesday include: street reconstruction, $88,000; storm drain construction, $196,000, and corporation yard development, $15,000.

The Cotati City Council also:

BUDGET — Set an adjourned meeting for 7:30 p.m. July 30 to consider approval of the proposed 1974-75 budget of $1.5 million.

COMMISSION — Named Anthony Tusler of 210 West Cotati Avenue to the parks and recreation commission.

BROCHURE — Authorized spending $175 to print 1,000 copies of a booklet explaining tenant and landlord rights.

RECREATION — Agreed to consider use of a storage room at city hall for teen-age recreation programs.

ZONING — Amended the zoning ordinance to allow outdoor restaurants and plant nurseries in commercial districts.

WAGES — Appointed councilmen Geoffrey Dunham and Harry E. Fassio to assist City Mgr. Robert A. Switzer in settling currently stalled salary negotiations with city workers.

TAXICABS — Granted the ABCO cab company a fare increase from 60 cents the first fifth of a mile to 70 cents.

Smallpox Fighters Sent To Help India

ATLANTA (UPI) — The U.S. Center for Disease Control has sent more than 20 representatives to India to help combat a smallpox epidemic and expects to send more.

Dr. Michael Lane, head of the CDC's smallpox program, said yesterday that six additional workers will be sent next month.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

New Hope Is Now Available To Elderly With Arthritis

No one dies of arthritis and many victims live to a ripe old age with the condition. However, the disorder may worsen, especially if there is increasing damage or disruption of the ligaments which hold the joints together. This was a serious and painful problem in the past, but today these elderly arthritics can be kept comfortable and enjoy moderate activity — an almost miraculous situation because some of these people have one or more completely disorganized joints, such as the shoulder, elbow, hip or knee. We refer mainly to people with joints which cannot be replaced with artificial devices.

HYDROCORTISONE IS most effective when injected directly into the unstable joint. Tablets or suppositories containing phenylbutazone or indomethacin also have proved to be valuable remedies. These drugs are superior to the older pain relievers such as aspirin or codeine, which are still available should they be necessary. Heat and massage are standard procedures for those receiving physiotherapy.

Dr. Trevor H. Howell, a London specialist in geriatrics, sees at least two oldsters a year with what he calls complete disorganization of one or more joints. What happens is better appreciated if we think of joints as gaps in the skeleton where movement takes place. Some contain ligaments which bind the bones together and stabilize the joint so that it will not slip, twist, or buckle. The fibrous capsule surrounding the joint also lends support, as do certain muscles and tendons.

INJURIES AND certain diseases, including arthritis, damage the ligaments, joint surfaces, and cartilage. Unless this situation is rectified early, it may progress and disrupt the joint's normal action. The hip, for example, is a ball and socket type structure. The socket may become so wide that the ball literally "floats" around in it. Dislocation may occur or the ball part pokes a hole through the socket.

These joints have "had it" as a result of years of arthritis, demineralization o the bony tissue, and degeneration of the ligaments. No longer do the joints fit together and they may be so stiff that movement is impossible. Perhaps motion is limited by lack of any hinge action. Fortunately, these people can be helped.

CHILD BACKSLIDING

A reader writes: My 4-year-old son, an only child, refuses to use the toilet and demands a bottle several times a day, even though he was toilet-trained and drinking milk from a glass by age 2. He takes great pride in other accomplishments such as washing and dressing himself, learning new words, and his physical strength. My husband feels the child is becoming lazy and enjoys the added attention. Please advise.

REPLY

Who is running the show at your house? This boy may have been pushed a little too fast at age 2, and now is showing his resentment. Throw away the bottle and offer him a glass.

CHOLESTEROL

L. L. writes: Can a man with a high cholesterol level have an occasional alcoholic drink?

REPLY

Several years ago, we reported an experiment in which 30 volunteers were given three ounces of whisky daily to determine whether the cholesterol level would rise or fall. It went up.

Dr. Van Dellen welcomes reader questions. While he cannot reply to them individually, he will answer those of general interest in his column. Write to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal, PO Box 330, 1040 B St., San Rafael, Ca. 94902.

BEDSORES

Mr. T. writes: What is the best thing to do for a newly discovered bedsore, about the size of a quarter, on an invalid's back?

REPLY

Clean the area with soap and water, dry carefully, and apply whatever antiseptic or healing solution your physician suggests. The invalid's position should be shifted at frequent intervals and involved parts protected with a rubber doughnut or similar device. Sleeping on sheepskin also is helpful. Keep the bottom sheet smooth.

INGENIOUS FIGURING

Jack writes: I'm a young man with no birth certificate. But I've had the seven year itch three times. Would this prove I'm 21?

REPLY

BEST SHOWS FOR TONIGHT

Unusual on television tonight:

KTVU (2), 6 p.m. — Veteran sportcaster Merle Harmon will join Alex Hawkins in announcing the play-by-play when the Portland Storm meets the Memphis Southmen in a World Football League televised game, originating from Memphis Memorial Stadium.

KCRA (3), KRON (4), 8 p.m. — Songwriter-entertainer Mac Davis plays host to the Lennon Sisters, Joan Rivers, Mike Neun and Fred Smoot on "The Mac Davis Show," featuring songs and comedy sketches drawn from Mac's life, in the second edition of this summer series.

KGO (7), KNTV (11), 8 p.m. — Dr. Mercy sets up a television surveillance system to keep Capital Hospital staff members on their toes when "Temperature's Rising" begins a new season. The series, starring Paul Lynde and Cleavon Little, focuses on the lighter side of life and the humor arising from intra-staff problems and personality clashes at Capital Hospital in Washington, D.C.

KPIX (5), KXTV (10), 9 p.m. — Calvin Lockhart, Jeff Bridges, Rob Reiner and Edward Asner star in "Hall of Anger," the drama of a newly segregated high school whose students turn from fears and frustrations to violence.

KQED (9), 9 p.m. — The encore special, "Newport Jazz Festival New York: A Tribute to Louis Armstrong," presents some of the world's greatest jazz musicians featured at the 1973 Newport Jazz Festival in New York in a monumental tribute to the legendary Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong.

KGO (7), KNTV (11), 11:30 p.m. — Evel Knievel, the world's most famous motorcycle daredevil, will teach Geraldo Rivera to cycle jump and chart-topping rock stars Seals and Croft perform some of their biggest hits on the next edition of "Geraldo Rivera: Good Night America."

Humane Society Dog Wash Is Slated

Junior Humane Society volunteers will wash and dry dogs for $2 each from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Marin County Humane Education Center, 1717 Bel Marin Keys Boulevard, Novato.

The young people will hold another dog wash at the Northgate Mall in San Rafael on Aug. 26.

Bank Sells Bucks At A Discount

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. tried a new advertising technique at its branch here. The bank reduced the price of money by 10 per cent and sold $10,000 to the earliest comers.

Over 200 persons lined up yesterday for a chance to buy $100 in cash from the bank in exchange for $90. Manager Noble said the bank sold $10,000 in the first hour, then sold an additional $10,000 for 5 per cent off.

Noble said no one was required to open an account.

He conceded the sale was a publicity stunt. "We have so many dollars to spend, we can put them in billboards or radio advertising. This is something different," he said.

CHANNEL CHUCKLES

Antismog Plan From Flournoy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Houston I. Flournoy proposed yesterday a program to fight smog, and also blasted the Democrats.

Speaking to the Kiwanis Club at the Biltmore Hotel, Flournoy proposed the eight-point smog control program and accused his November opponent, Edmund G. Brown Jr. and other Democrats of using Watergate as a political ploy in California politics.

The formation of an Air Quality Control Board which would hear appeals from local smog control districts,

A $5.5 million pilot program in Riverside County for inspection of auto emission devices,

An increase of the present annual $1.5 million state air pollution research,

That the Air Pollution Control District be given increased power to levy fines on polluters,

That oil companies install nozzles on gasoline pumps to prevent evaporation of fumes into the air,

Support for local mass transit programs,

That the state analyze land and transportation planning for their impact on air pollution,

That maximum supplies of natural and low-sulfur fuel oil be maintained in the state.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Tony Musante Has No Qualms About Playing Lieut. Calley

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Musante happened to be sitting in his agent's office in Los Angeles a few weeks ago when the phone rang. The caller asked if the star of the "Toma" series was available for a certain role.

The agent, Musante recalled, "turned to me and said, 'Do you have any political reservations about playing William Calley?' And I said no, none at all."

That, he said, is how producer Stanley Kramer tapped him for the title role in "The Trial of Lt. Calley," which ABC says probably will be aired late this year. No definite date has been set.

The drama is based on the court-martial that convicted the former Army officer of killing 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in 1968. Calley now is in prison at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

"At this point, I can't say how I personally feel about him," Musante said. "But I do feel, regardless of what my opinions are by the time I finish the show, that it's a story that should be told."

Musante, whose knowledge of the Calley case is about that of the average newspaper and magazine reader, said he'll spend the next few weeks reading all he can about it to prepare for his role.

The actor, a Bridgeport, Conn., native whose only connection with the military was as an Army Reserve clerk-typist in the pre-Vietnam era, was asked how he felt when Calley, 31, was convicted in 1971.

"I personally feel that justice was not done at the trial," Musante said. "By his own admission, I know the man did kill. Do I think this is right? No, of course not.

"On the other hand, I know other people killed at My Lai in a similar manner. I'm not going to say he's a scapegoat, but it didn't sit well with me that he was one man singled out, regardless of whatever he's like."

Musante, who portrayed a cop of many disguises in the since-canceled "Toma" series on ABC, said he has no qualms of any kind about portraying Calley.

Seven In Family Perish In Blaze

MARSHALL, Tex. (UPI) — Seven members of a farm family ranging in age from 11 months to 80 years died early today in a fire which destroyed their small frame house.

Harrison County Deputy Leroy Abreu said the victims were all members of the Lee family. Two members escaped, the father who was away, and a daughter, who was spending the night with a neighbor.

The victims were Nick Lee, 80, the grandfather; Mary Lee, 40, his daughter-in-law and the mother of the rest of the victims—Willie May Lee, 25; Freddie Lee, 25; Willie C. Lee, 16; Jimmy Lee, 16, and Calvin Lee, 11 months.

BRIGHT STAMPS — Bright colors and upbeat themes make U.S. stamps messages and not just messengers. (Christian Science Monitor Photo)

Stamps Do More Than Send Mail

By DAVID WINDER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Americans may gripe over the price of their first-class mail, but that 10-cent stamp may in fact be a wonderfully inexpensive and attractive way to sell the United States.

Any day now U.S. residents will be receiving letters in the mail reminding them of their heritage, which is precisely what the current bicentennial stamps are meant to do.

"They depict our country with its best possibilities. It presents achievements of history, science, and technology. It's a window on American life and history." He also heads the Stamp Advisory Committee.

Dealer Jacques Minkus, who operates 36 stamp stores across the United States, says stamps are "little ambassadors."

All those stories about out-of-the-way Pacific islands making a mint out of selling their exotic fish or flower stamps, or even depending on their sale, is simply not true, Minkus claims, or at least pales in comparison to their public relations value.

"They get some additional revenue, it's true," he says, "but more important is a lot of additional goodwill. And dignified public relations, yes, because they are trying very hard to give you a bit of their history, their beauty, their culture, and their aspirations on a tiny piece of paper."

The U.S. Postal Service also is getting the message on the financial value of stamps.

Starting this month it is launching a $5-million advertising campaign to get a larger slice of the stamp-collecting market by pushing the sale of stamp-collecting albums, kits, and commemorative stamps issues.

"Generating an even greater interest in U.S. history" is one of the motivations, according to Thomas Engel, manager of the stamp advertising department of the U.S. Postal Service in Washington. But he admits the service also has dollar signs in its eyes.

The $5-million advertising campaign, for instance, is expected to reap $50 million profit a year, at a time when the U.S. postal service is some $385 million in the red.

With its brighter, more attractive stamps, the U.S. Postal Service also can count on exciting greater collector interest.

Remember those dreary postage stamps a few years ago of grim, unsmiling George Washingtons and Benjamin Franklins in washed-out blues and greens?

Minkus regards earlier American stamps as a disgrace — "too embarrassing to send to friends overseas. Even little Liechtenstein of San Marino does a better job." But with stamps like the recent eight works of art on letter writing by such famous artists as Goya and Raphael to commemorate, the Universal Postal Union, Minkus is changing his tune.

Even the U.S. Postal Service admits it is surprised with the public's reaction.

Not long ago it was so bold as

Float By Hobby Tree Is Winner In Parade

A 12-foot tall statue of Betsy Ross won the sweepstakes award for the Hobby Tree in the annual Fourth of July Parade in Corte Madera.

Torso of the statue was mounted atop a Volkswagen which was hidden under the 170 yards of material required to make the skirt for the designer of the American flag. Hobby Tree owner Milo Illich piloted the float through a 1-inch peephole in the skirt.

It was startling to see the huge figure gracefully moving down the street, carrying a 13-starred flag as her skirts ruffled slightly in the breeze.

The parade theme of "Happiness is a Fourth of July Parade", was further carried out by the Hobby Tree's second float, a garden filled with the stores' staff dressed as famous persons who gave us our first Fourth of July.

Robert Brown and his daughter Paula were dressed as Mr. and Mrs. Paul Revere and drove the second float. Bob Williamson, in full colonial military general's uniform was George Washington. Karen Illich in a blue satin hoop skirt and a 100-year-old lace shawl was Martha Washington. David, Susan and Daniel Illich were the Washington's children.

Mary Halbe, dressed in a white fluffy hoop skirt, represented Abigail Adams and Lindy Sedley in a blue checked full dress and white wig represented Dolly Madison. Bert Lucia was dressed as Ben Franklin, complete with bald head and kite.

Also, the perfect E flat of the Hobby Tree's one-fifth scale Liberty Bell could be heard "Proclaiming liberty throughout the land" from the garden of the second float.

Both the bust torso of Betsy Ross and the Liberty Bell are on display daily at the Hobby Tree. All of the staff participated in making the floats, and will assist other groups who wish to build floats or large displays.

Junior Art Fair Draws 63 Young Participants

Milo Illich of the Hobby Tree, assisted by Nancy Ramsey, Lois Pierie and Georgella Amundsen, announced that there were 63 official junior entrants this year with over 139 assistant-participants to make this the largest Junior Art Fair ever.

All participants reported good sales and were happy with the weather, location and customers who attended the affair.

Sales of $70 were reported.

Bob Williamson of the Hobby Tree reported that many persons dropped into the store to learn more about the fair as well as to receive individual instruction or assistance on how to carry out their plans. Illich stated that next year it is the Chamber's hope to double, again, the size of the children's fair.

Popularity Of Games Is Growing

NEW YORK (UPI) — The games people play can score heavily in the effort to hold the American family together.

That's the message from a man who should know — James J. Shea Jr., a master gamesman who truly believes that the family who plays together stays together. The Milton Bradley Co., a leading games and toys firm which Shea heads, racked up gross sales of $146.5 million last year, nearly a 17 per cent increase over 1972, and a $180 million gross is expected this year.

"The increased sale of games has come about for several reasons," Shea, the father of five, said in an interview at the New York showroom of his Springfield, Mass. company.

"Part of it is the fear of parents that the family is drifting apart, and the scare of the drug scene.

"Family type games provide communication between children and parents, and parents feel they need this kind of involvement. This can mean board games, cards, physical games, puzzles or outdoor sports games — they've all had a tremendous growth in popularity in the past five years.

"Then there's inflation. Real income for the consumer is diminished and activities are being confined to the home more than previously, meaning more games and puzzles, which were a craze during the Depression. In England, where inflation is even more rampant, game sales have doubled within the year."

The popularity of games is in exact ratio to the amount of leisure available to society. Long working hours and religious prejudice against "frivolities" kept the United States generally ignorant of the pleasures of the gaming board until the Civil War. What board games could be bought were imported from Europe.

Milton Bradley, a Yankee printer worried by financial difficulties, played one of these imported games with a friend in 1860 and felt positively cheered. He decided to publish a game about life in the moralistic Puritan tradition, with "happy old age" rather than "ruin" as the goal. With this "Checkered Game of Life," the first American game manufacturing business was born.

"We issued a new three-dimensional 'Game of Life' to mark our centennial in 1960, but it reflected changes in American values," Shea said. "It is more about the material aspects of life — the chance to go to college, marriage, family, getting insurance, borrowing money, the chance to win a million dollars."

The materialistic trend was noticeable in games as early as 1901 when Parker Brothers, another leading game firm, introduced "Wall Street," and a few years later Americans were playing "I'm A Millionaire." Just as popular as strike it rich games are topical game subjects.

As early as 1911 there was a game titled "Sky, the Aviator's Game." Games about contemporary activities on the current market involve drilling for oil, land development and ecology, conservation of wildlife and roller derbies.

"But we stay away from games that capitalize on temporary political situations, such as Watergate," she said. "When they cease being news, sales stop."

Shea said there was a time when people said television would kill family games. But tying board games into popular television shows has had just the opposite effect.

There are a slew of TV-inspired games including "Match Game," "The Waltons," "The Price is Right," "Password," "Beat the Clock," and "Concentration," a best seller for many years.

Most of the 20 major game companies have their own staff which develops new games and tests them for popularity. Some companies buy ideas from firms which are "think tanks" for new toys and games. The public submits thousands of ideas to the industry each year and a few are a success, bringing royalties to their inventors.

The most famous example of this was "Monopoly," devised by the late Charles Darrow, who had been thrown out of a job by the Depression. The game was turned down by Parker Brothers when he first submitted it, but after he had sold a few thousand on his own, Parker bought it in 1935. Royalties made Darrow a millionaire.

"But we stay away from unsolicited game ideas now," a Parker spokesman said. "We used to get 3,000 a year and maybe only five were worth publishing. It was expensive to screen these, so now all submissions are returned unopened."

The old standbys — chess, poker, cribbage, bingo, dominoes and checkers — are holding their own. Backgammon is enjoying a new popularity in both the United States and Europe. The fact that Backgammon began as an Egyptian game 3,000 years before Christ proves that any game with a good balance of luck and skill has a future.

School District 'Selling' Classes

SAN JOSE (UPI) — In the Alum Rock Unified School District, a parent can choose for his child the kind of school that he wants.

And a teacher can run the kind of class that he wishes — traditional or experimental — as long as the parents are happy.

This is the nation's first experiment with the hotly debated idea of vouchers, a proposal so radical that few wanted it even tested.

"The experiment is alive and well," William J. Jefferds, the schools superintendent said. "The chaos that was supposed to happen didn't. In general the response of parents, teachers and students is pretty good."

In a voucher system, a voucher worth money goes with a youngster to the school or "minischool" of a parent's choice. The minischool fluorishes or fails by popular demand.

"The problem is how to design a system that serves the needs of the clients instead of the system," Joel Levin, project director, said. "Stores without clients close down, but schools that nobody likes usually just go on and on."

With vouchers as "a market mechanism," Alum Rock is an attempt to introduce competition into the educational apparatus.

In an unlimited voucher system, parents could use the taxpayers' funds to send their children to parochial or private schools, as well as public, and this has inspired bitter criticism. It was feared that vouchers would be a device for racial segregation, or that it would be a gimmick to circumvent the separation of church and state. That isn't a problem in Alum Rock.

Militant opposition has come from national organizations of school administrators and teachers. The administrators do not like the loss of control over classroom functions, and the teachers see voucher systems as a possible threat to job security.

When the federal government sought school district to try vouchers, and offered millions of dollars, only one in the nation was willing — Alum Rock.

"We were looking for a way to decentralize, a way to involve parents and the community, and this seemed a way to do it," Jefferds said.

tricts, is an area of small homes "on the wrong side of the freeway" in sprawling San Jose. Fifty per cent of the pupil population is Spanish-surnamed, 12 per cent black, and 38 per cent white and Oriental. Thirty-six per cent of the families are on welfare.

In the 1973-74 school year, the federal government put up $2.9 million for the experiment, enough to pay project administrative and evaluating costs, plus the vouchers.

Each child carried a $750 voucher, and in an effort to help the disadvantaged, each child on the school lunch program carries another $275. In spite of the money, the total district budget remains below the state average.

Because of state laws, the Alum Rock plan did not include parochial and private school options when it was begun in 1972, thus avoiding those controversies. A law was passed this year authorizing inclusion of private schools, but the restrictions were so tight as to make it practically impossible.

To the surprise of some, the vouchers did not produce a racial segregation dispute, either. Minischools did not seem to be selected by race, and the poorest families — thought to prefer traditional school options — showed much interest in the innovative, as well.

When the program began, six of Alum Rock's 25 schools joined the voucher program. This year 13 schools, housing a total of 46 minischools, and 8,900 students were involved.

No school joins the program without what Jefferds calls "a double green light," approval from both the faculty and the parent community.

Typically, a participating school houses three minischools — including one traditional, "basic skills" school. Others run the gamut.

They may be "open classrooms" utilizing team teaching, individualized, multicultural, bilingual or emphasizing specialities such as science or fine arts. One, called "School 2000," builds its curriculum around problems of the future.

Some minischools' popularity has skyrocketed far beyond capacity, others have lost half their pupils — and the money and staff that goes with them. One teacher established his own, one-teacher minischool, but gave it up when he lost two-thirds of his class.

The minischool budget is allocated by the teachers. It depends on voucher money, and a parent can withdraw his child at any time.

The money is used for purchase of educational materials, and to pay special consultants and aides. One school bought carpeting, another rented daytime use of a swimming pool and a gym in an apartment building, and another leased its own bus for excursions every afternoon.

Need For Energy Conservation Just As Great As It Ever Was

By DAVID ANABLE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Okay, men, off with those jackets and ties, and roll up those shirt-sleeves.

Now . . . you're right in fashion for an energy-saving U.S. summer, courtesy of the Federal Energy Administration (FEA).

For, though the days and nights may be growing hotter, the need to conserve energy used to operate air conditioners is undiminished, federal officials say. And whereas in winter, patriotisim and necessity demanded that furnace thermostats be pushed resolutely lower, in summer the air-conditioner settings need to be adjusted, with equal resolution, higher — to 78 degrees or above.

All of which explains why energy czar John C. Sawhill can be found at his desk or giving speeches in an open-necked short-sleeved dress shirt — the very epitome of the summer-saver style — while all across the federal Establishment bureaucrats breathe deeply the languid 78-degree air.

If the nation as a whole follows the Sawhill style, at least in raising home and office temperatures to 78 degrees or more, some 36 billion kilowatts of electricity could be saved this summer. That's 2 per cent of the country's annual electricity consumption.

Up to now Americans have far surpassed the energy-saving goals set by President Nixon — a 7 per cent saving by federal departments and a 5 per cent saving by private industry and individuals.

For the first nine months of the fiscal year starting July 1, 1973, for instance, the federal establishment's energy use was cut to 26 per cent of the projected figure for the period. And, on a local electrical level, New York's Consolidated Edison says its customers so far are keeping up their 10 per cent conservation effort.

Christian Science Monitor sketch by Tom Brown

The FEA is going to press with a new booklet entitled "Tips for Energy Savers." Among its 100 or so "tips" are these for hot weather:

Set thermostats at 78 degrees or above.

Close off unused rooms.

Nostalgia Books Stress Old Toys

By FREDERIC HUNTER
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

"I just couldn't control myself," he recalls. He thought of marbles and jacks, hide-n-seek, jump rope, and baseball cards.

Then, although he discovered that orange crates aren't made of wood anymore, Sturner, a Manhattan financial planner, did build a scrapwood and roller-skate scooter. And he kept thinking about his boyhood games until, eventually, he became a working member of the nostalgia movement now sweeping America.

Lest they be lost from the national consciousness, he wrote a how-to book about games that aren't much played anymore now that TV, Little League, and commercially made toys vie for children's attention.

Speaking of Sturner's "What Did You Do When You Were a Kid?" Thomas Dunne, an editor at St. Martin's Press, comments, "It has done very well for us." The book has sold 10,000 hard-cover copies at $6.95 and, as a result, a sequel is planned.

Sturner also has become a kind of celebrity in his home neighborhood in Somerset, N. J. "Kids stop me on the street and say they enjoyed the book," he says. He also reports that while the scooter has been outgrown ("It's in the garage") his children still play an occasional game of Skelly, a game played with weighted soda pop bottle tops.

The case of Sturner and his book is far from unique. In fact, the pull of nostalgia and the desire of parents to lure children away from television has sparked a mini-trend in the book world.

Workman Publishing's "The Great American Marble Book" has sold "extremely well," says publisher Peter Workman. "We've shipped 35,000 copies," he notes. Offering a "lexicon of mibology," a history of marbles in world culture and instructions on how to play 50 marble games, the soft-cover book sells for $2.50. A companion bag of marbles at $1.50 has helped it along.

If the "GAM" Book has not yet triggered a nationwide revival in marbles games, it has catapulted author Fred Ferretti into unexpected notoriety. Whereas last year he covered the U.S. Marbles Championships as a reporter, this year he crowned the winner.

Workman is considering a sequel to the "GAM" Book. But this fall the company will publish a "nostalgic and up-to-date" book called "Jump Rope." Next spring it will bring out a new Ferretti book dealing with street, sidewalk, and back-porch games.

Meanwhile, Clarkson No. Potter, Inc., has published what is probably the definitive study on "The Top: Universal Toy, Enduring Pastime." The work of D. W. Gould, a retired Philadelphia engineer, the book presents a history and scholarly typology of tops as well as detailing their connection to Yo-Yos, gyroscopes, and whirling dervishes.

Viking Press also has scheduled publication this fall of "Trash-Can Toys and Games." According to editor Barbara Burn, "the book is addressed to parents and children." It features detailed drawings of how to make old-fashioned and modern toys from items consigned to the trash bin. It also tells today's youngsters how to play kick-the-can. (Remember that one?)

"Everybody wants to go back," comments Mr. Sturner of the nostalgia wave. But interest in the games of yesteryear is not, of course, confined to the publishing field.

Teen-Age Girls Closing Crime Gap Between Boys

CHICAGO (UPI) — Girls in their teens cheat, shoplift, use drugs and sell marijuana just about as often as teen-aged boys. They also fight, rob, carry guns and knives and use them.

That is one finding of a three-year study on juvenile delinquency by the Institute of Juvenile Research. More than 3,000 Illinois teen-agers were interviewed.

"Shoplifting has increased among teen-aged girls. Strong-arming has increased. Fist fights. Carrying a weapon. Gang fights," said Patricia Miller, survey director.

"No one has ever found the amount we found which leads us to believe there has been a dramatic jump."

Increased female juvenile delinquency is not confined to Illinois. The FBI Uniform Crime Report shows serious crime committed by girls under 18 has increased 306.1 per cent since 1960. The increase for teen-aged boys was 81.6 per cent.

But this increase in juvenile

Bicycle Accident Rate Is Zooming

By DAVID ANABLE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Here comes Pete, parcel strapped on his back, hair streaming, pedalling up New York's Fifth Avenue against a mighty flow of cars, trucks, and buses. "Yes, it's against the law," he agrees after dodging agilely down a sidestreet (through the red stoplight), "but I've been doing it for months and never been stopped or ticketed."

And there goes Linda, bag over shoulder, jeans rolled above the ankles, bicycling to work with the Fifth Avenue stream (it's "very dangerous" to buck the vehicle tide) . . . but she ignores stoplights "all the time" and she's "never stopped at a stop sign yet."

Police officers, U.S. Government officials, and bicycle experts all admit that U.S. streets and highways are flooded with Petes and Lindas flouting traffic laws with impunity — and almost certainly doing much to account for the very rapidly rising bicycle accident rate.

Bicycle laws, and especially their enforcement, these experts agree, have been swamped by America's phenomenal rush to leap onto a bike.

Each of the last two years have seen more bicycles produced in the U.S. than cars — more than 15 million new bikes will hit American roads this year alone. By the end of 1974, officials estimate, some 100 million bicycles will be in use across the nation.

All of which has caught legislators and traffic engineers off guard.

"The police have not been able to cope with the recent surge of bicycle 'purchases,' " admits Frank Roberson, acting director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP). "We have found out that most police departments are not doing very much about bicycles . . . But police departments realize that they are going to have to start enforcing the statutes and ordinances."

"Some communities are very strict, others are very lax," comments Ed Kearney, executive director of the National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances (NCUTLO).

The self-propelled anarchy of some bikers might be amusing were it not for the soaring accident statistics.

A report released in June by the National Highway Safety Committee, says that bicycle fatalities between November and February rose 39 per cent, while motor accident fatalities fell 25 per cent. It cites bicyclists ignoring stop signs as the leading cause of intersection crashes involving cars.

The report recommends "most importantly, the police should enforce the traffic laws for bicyclists operating on the highway in the same manner they would for motorists." But what laws? — police spokesmen and bicycle specialists ask.

In some states the bicycle is a "vehicle" subject to vehicle laws. In others it is not.

And even if the laws were uniform, police spokesmen complain, they have "other priorities."

"If we went to work on all the bicyclists, then we couldn't cope with all the cars," says a police inspector in the New York City traffic division.

Urged on by Congress's 1973 Federal Highway Act, a number of groups of specialists are studying the two-wheel problems.

The National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances — which in the 1930's drafted the Uniform Vehicle Code which was the basis for most state vehicle laws — is reexamining American and European bicycle rules. Before the year is out, the committee will submit recommendations to the Secretary of Transportation for revised, standardized laws.

Menawhile, the International Association of Chiefs of Police also is under contract to the Department of Transportation — reviewing bicycle law enforcement in 50 states and 50 selected cities. By year's end it, too, will submit a report to Transportation Secretary Claude S. Brinegar.

Brinegar has to report back to Congress next January on the results of these and other studies.

Girls Close Teen-Age Crime Gap

delinquency has not occurred among male adolescents, according to Dr. William Simon, the institute's director of sociology and anthropology programs.

"The population grew. So there are more people out there doing things. But if you compare statistics over a 20-year period, those for boys haven't changed," he said.

The Illinois study was not concerned especially with female adolescents, but tentative findings appear to shatter some timeworn stereotypes.

"There is no basis to the image of a female delinquent . . . as someone very committed to a role that is self-destructive. She feels no less adequate. Her self-esteem is is no lower," Miss Miller said.

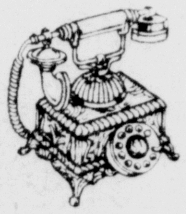

"Anyone who thinks he can buy immunity from his type of residence is kidding himself," Simon said. "Also family variables have little effect. In a curious way, it is a lot more accidental than that."
